THE COVER BY PETER HORRIDGE

"When Radio Times approached me to design the cover for this special issue, the editors suggested it would be a good idea to echo the cover from Queen Elizabeth II's coronation in 1953, which was created by Eric Fraser.

"I saw it as an opportunity to create something special but different, combining heraldic influences with significant images of the day, architectural and symbolic.

"I've now produced many pieces for our new King (including the official coronation emblem, above right), but always third-hand – maybe I'll meet him one day!"

Radio Times marks the coronation of King Charles III

CORONATIONS MAKE GREAT television. The BBC knew that in 1937 when its only outside broadcast unit was deployed to cover the royal procession of King George VI as it passed Hyde Park Corner. Those who saw it on their rudimentary television sets must have thought they had witnessed a miracle, although according to Petroc Trelawny, one of our contributors to this special commemorative issue of Radio Times, no more than 10,000 viewers saw the show.

But times – and technology – change. By 1953 more than 20 million witnessed the crowning of Queen Elizabeth II as a camera it seems. According to Popplewell, it's estimated that four billion people around the globe watched the coverage of the state funeral of her late Majesty the Queen.

But much as the pomp and ceremony of a royal occasion attract the attention of people from across the globe, reaching the remotest corners of the world including, apparently, Antarctica, this coronation is a uniquely British affair. And it's closer to home that its real impact will surely be felt.

Because on Saturday

the nation will enjoy a collective experience unlike any other that most of us have known. In the age of streaming and YouTube, when a huge variety of competing screen-based distractions have fractured our media into a blizzard of choice, we will come together to share a moment of joy and celebration with tens of millions of others.

That, in its own way, is something of a miracle. We hope this special issue will help guide you through the day so you can enjoy it to the full.

with a high-powered lens zoomed in on the smallest details including, at one point, the smile of a four-year-old Prince Charles.

Seventy years on the most up-to-date technology will be in action again – remote cameras, airborne cameras, high-definition cameras – recording the Coronation of King Charles III in Westminster Abbey for not just the BBC but also ITV and Sky and television stations around the world. As the woman in charge of the BBC's operation, Claire Popplewell, confirmed to Radio Times this week, Saturday's coronation ceremony and the coronation concert on Sunday will be seen in more than 125 countries. Which, although astonishing, is just about par for the course,

Sir Simon Schama saw a little boy on TV in 1953 and wondered about his future... 70 years later, the King's time has come

THE RT INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

IT IS HARD, perhaps impossible, to overstate just how momentous it will be when King Charles advances up the nave of Westminster Abbey on Saturday morning – momentous both for him and for the British monarchy. At 74, the crown will finally be within his grasp after a lifetime of waiting, and an institution that can date itself to the tenth century will, if all goes well, be setting fair sail towards the next.

For the many millions watching, it holds the promise of era-defining, possibly even epochal, television. But before we gather around coffee tables laden with coronation quiche and enough of the stronger stuff to get us through two hours of Huw Edwards at his most earnest, Simon Schama wants us to watch the last coronation, that of Charles's mother, the late Queen, which is available in pretty much its entirety on YouTube.

In particular, Schama directs us to a few flickering frames in the ghostly parade of long-dead prelates, peers of the realm and statesmen – as far from us today as they were then from 1883 – that presages this weekend's events. "The BBC was not supposed to do close-ups of the Queen," says the eminent historian and broadcaster, himself 78. "But at one point they zoom in on the little four-year-old Charles. It's just after she's crowned and he's very excited. It's very, very sweet, an amazing moment. I remember watching on our black-and-white television, I must have been eight, and asking my mother and father, 'Do you think his mummy and daddy have told him he's going to be King?'"

Now the boy is a slightly stooped old man. No other monarch has come to the British throne so late in life and facing so many conflicting demands. "It's the longest gap between coronations in all British history," says Schama. "Edward VII had 64 years between Queen Victoria's coronation and his. This, 70 years, is an all-time record."

In those seven decades, Britain and the world have changed utterly. The United Kingdom that

SIR SIMON SCHAMA

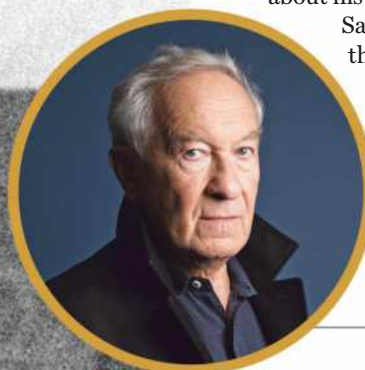

Charles surveys – multicultural, largely non-churchgoing, post-industrial, stripped of empire and possibly on the edge of break up – has little in common with the country his mother inherited from George VI in 1952. Yet, as the Archbishop of Canterbury places St Edward’s Crown on his head, Charles must ask himself the same question his mother and all kings and queens before her have had to answer – what am I to do?

“Many coronations have taken place at times of terrible discontinuity and conflict,” says Schama, knighted by Prince William in 2019 and, for all his centre-left inclinations, an ardent royalist. “For the Queen in 1953, it was all about how smoothly can the empire morph into the Commonwealth. The issue for Charles is: how does Britain stand tall as a place of decency and civic intelligence? As a society that cherishes its past, but in which its past isn’t a dead weight. It’s the fate of Britain going into the future.”

FOR BRITONS OF all social classes, ethnic backgrounds, faiths and political beliefs, there could hardly be higher stakes but, for much of the watching world, there are different concerns. The peoples of the Commonwealth will be looking for confirmation that the family that provides, for now, their head of state is still relevant. US audiences are likely to have their eyes on Harry, attending without his American wife Meghan, who will be staying with the couple’s children in California. “In America, I’m sure there will be a soap-opera aspect of it,” says Schama, a professor of history at New York’s Columbia University. But, he points out, family problems are not a new phenomenon at coronations. “I may be wrong, but William IV had ten illegitimate children, four of whom were in Westminster Abbey to see him crowned. So, it could be worse.”

There will be another ghost in the confines of an abbey first built by Edward the Confessor in 1052, that of Charles’s former wife Diana – the queen who might have been. “Whatever you feel about the Diana tragedy, which it absolutely was, a personal catastrophe for everybody, especially the two boys, I don’t think that will be a drag now on Charles. He will succeed if he can give voice to the majority of Britain. It won’t be about his own personal drama.”

Saturday, then, is an opportunity for the King to be seen as a monarch rather than a divorced septuagenarian in dispute with his youngest son. And, as kings who are by necessity going to have short reigns must do, to showcase his heir. “People will be looking at the grandchildren, but in particular they will be looking at >

◁ William and Kate because they are the future.”

That is the paradox at the heart of Saturday's ceremonials, the need to cast forward and, simultaneously, look backwards. “The two things are contradictory,” Schama admits. “Monarchy has to be very, very old, and yet be very attentive to the new, to the moment.”

JUST HOW OLD the old bits of the coronation are is, even for Schama, quite staggering. “The first English coronation was King Edgar's at Bath in the year 973 and basic elements of the coronation are, quite amazingly, the same.” The Old Testament anointing of Solomon would have been sung in Latin – the same biblical story will be sung in English for Charles in the form of Handel's Zadok the Priest, he says. “The coronation oath, although various bits have changed over the centuries, still promises to do justice, and keep the peace. After the oath comes the anointing, the God bit. And then the investiture with regalia and the homage.

“Some people might say, ‘Well, that just proves how ludicrously obsolete all this stuff is,’ but it is a sort of miracle. As far as I know, it's the only form of inaugural installation ritual that has survived for more than a millennium. That's remarkable, I find it moving.”

A recent YouGov poll found only 32 per cent of 18- to 24-year-olds support the monarchy. Will the ancient mysteries, the anointing of Charles and then Camilla with chrism, made with oil harvested from groves on the Mount of Olives and blessed in Jerusalem's ancient Church of the Holy Sepulchre, change their minds and secure the monarchy's future? “We see ourselves as living in a very matter-of-fact world, in our digital universe,” Schama says. “But if you think about something like Game of Thrones, then our kind of modernity is not incompatible with a feeling for magic and mystery and ritual.”

That ritual of coronation, the getting the actual crown on his head bit, comes with some jeopardy. We know there is much that could go awry, says Schama, because it has before. “Wonderful cock-ups. They put Edward VII's crown on his head the wrong way round – archbishops are hopeless at this! They put the ring on Queen Victoria's wrong finger, and they had to kind of tug it off again, which was so painful she complained bitterly. There are massive opportunities to get it wrong. It's a bit like opera, you suspend your disbelief and if something ridiculous happens, you are in trouble. So there could be terrible blunders, but I don't think Charles will make one.”

Nonetheless, Schama's fingers will be crossed “for him and for Britain”. Britain might need it. The kingdom is clearly divided, many in Scotland wish to leave it. Addressing this is something Schama thinks Charles should treat as a priority. “He should do something in Scotland of the magnitude of the Queen's trip to Ireland in 2011, which was one of the greatest moments in her reign. We don't know about the Scottish National Party [right now], but the independence movement is very real and very strong. It sounds daft to say it but Charles has to project that sense of pride and happiness about being British, even in very beleaguered times. On many occasions the coronation has been an attempt to establish stability after a time of bitter division. That's why William the Conqueror insisted on having his coronation in Westminster Abbey.”

IN 1066 WILLIAM took his vows in Latin and spoke Norman French, a reminder that coronations have often been quite European affairs. “We've had French kings and Dutch kings and German kings,” says Schama. “We are naturally part of a bigger thing.” Is that, perhaps, the great wound that Charles might seek to heal – the one caused by Brexit? “A coronation is an attempt to reboot things and that is disproportionately important when people are feeling different things about what it means to be British.

“Are you more likely to be a monarchist if you're a Brexiteer? Probably. But it doesn't follow from being a Remainer to being a republican and I think that's a good thing. Would I leave a street party if I discovered the person next to me, with a Charles and Camilla mug, was a Brexiteer? No, I absolutely wouldn't.”

As he considers a daunting to-do list, the King has one great advantage, says Schama. The very things he was once mocked for, his enthusiasm for environmental causes and unease around society's abandonment of spirituality, are now commonplace concerns – the zeitgeist has finally caught up with the King.

“The best chance he has of monarchy enduring is completely to be himself. I know he's had to button his lip and he understands the constitutional position, that you have to be vanilla-neutral about absolutely everything. But he shouldn't turn himself into a completely silent king and I doubt very much whether he's capable of doing that. Being true to himself is probably the best way to endear himself to the country.”

But, before he can address that, Charles must navigate the coronation. “This will be the test,” says Schama. “Come 7 May, the question will be, have two hours of ritual made his job harder or easier? And I really don't know the answer to that.”

'I owe the King everything'

“It was an honour to create the royal procession map for Radio Times,” says illustrator Katherine Baxter, “because I owe the King everything.”

Support from the Prince's Trust when she was in her 20s changed Katherine's life. She'd been planning to train to be a BBC set painter, but first got glandular fever and then ME. In 1989, aged 25, she was bedridden and being cared for by her parents. “I had lost my career, I had lost everything,” she says.

“When I had the energy, I started to draw tiny pen-and-ink images for cassette boxes. Then, as I began to feel a bit better, I wrote a business plan and applied for a grant from the Prince's Youth Business Trust, which he'd set up to help disadvantaged young people. I got a grant and was commissioned to draw my first ever map, of the Duchy of Cornwall, which I presented to him at the Prince's Youth Business Trust exhibition in 1994. He was really intrigued by my work, so I would send him my illustrations and he was extremely encouraging. When I was ill, I'd lost all my confidence. Meeting Prince Charles was no doubt at all the beginning of my getting better. Friends of his even became my mentors.

“The coronation map was a mammoth task – hundreds of hours of work have gone into it. I hand-draw with a Rotring pen under a big magnifying glass [below], using Apple Maps and Google Earth, and then scan the images. I used to be a watercolourist, but these days I do digital colouring in Photoshop, so the map is a hybrid of hand-drawn and digital work.

“I put the King and Queen's two Jack Russell rescue dogs, Beth and Bluebell, in too. One of them has escaped into Green Park!

“ME was life-changing in so many ways, but through it I found my faith: I'm now also a part-time lay chaplain in Mousehole, here in Cornwall. The then Duke of Cornwall visited in July last year. I accosted him just before he got into his car, grabbed his hand and said, “Because of you, sir, I am an illustrator.” I'm so glad I finally managed to say thank you.” AS TOLD TO JANE HILL

INTERVIEW BY
KATE BATTERSBY

THE VERY REV Dr David Hoyle MBE, Dean of Westminster, overseer of the spiritual life of the Collegiate Church of St Peter at Westminster – known to most of us as Westminster Abbey – is musing on his “rollercoaster ride” since he became the 39th incumbent of the ancient role in November 2019. First came the pandemic and the closure of the Abbey (“All wrong, ghastly”) then, after the reopening, Dr Hoyle conducted the service of thanksgiving for the life of the late Duke of Edinburgh, before leading the state funeral for the Queen last September. Yet he is absolutely clear that nothing can be more important than what comes next.

“The coronation is the most historic thing I will do while I'm here, without a doubt,” says Dr Hoyle in his roomy office at the Deanery, furnished much like a gentleman's club and divided from the Abbey itself by a single wall. “I'm excited and fascinated. I feel the weight of history, along with the privilege and responsibility of the occasion. I am really conscious I'm doing something of great significance in the life of the Church, and my faith.” Then he glances across at Henry, the family cat, snoozing blissfully on a cushion, and smiles.

“It's a little bit of pressure, but it's quite liberating,” Dr Hoyle says. “This is what we do here. Even I'm surprised that I'm just so confident. We will do a very good job. But I'm not sure the coronation is the most sacred moment I will have here.”

'A quiet voice behind me said, Good luck, sir'

DR DAVID HOYLE

That is fairly startling to hear. It is a ceremony underscored by religious ritual and even relics. The Cross of Wales used at the head of the procession includes a gift from the Pope – fragments said to come from the cross on which Jesus was crucified. Above all, the Archbishop of Canterbury will anoint Charles III with consecrated oil sourced from the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem, an act so sacred that it will not be televised – the Archbishop calls it “a private moment between a new King and the King of Kings”.

As Dean, Dr Hoyle will assist the Archbishop at the anointing, and later the Archbishop will receive St Edward's Crown from the Dean before placing it on the sovereign's head. Yet for 65-year-old Dr Hoyle, his most sacred experiences are defined by being unscripted.

“At the coronation I will be deeply prepared, feeling quite in control,” he says. “But the most

‘We won’t drop the ball’

How do you hold your nerve before an audience of billions? The Dean of Westminster shares his secrets sacred moments are when I step outside that which I can control, when I get into really deep mysteries, in the presence of things which matter profoundly but which are difficult to describe. It catches you unawares.”

So many of us watching the great ceremonial services tend to see only the robes of senior clergy rather than the person wearing them. Dr Hoyle is a fount of anecdotes, particularly on the moments captured neither by cameras nor microphones.

On Monday 19 September last year, as a global audience of billions watched the gun carriage bearing the late Queen’s coffin make its journey from Parliament, Dr Hoyle stepped out of the Abbey’s Great West Door, past a single guardsman, to await the procession’s arrival.

“I was taking some deep breaths before this extraordinary service, thinking, ‘What’s a boy from Watford Grammar doing here?’” he recalls. “And then a quiet voice behind me said, ‘Good luck, sir’ – it was the guardsman. Every camera was on the gun carriage, so there is no footage of it. But it was very moving.

“During the funeral itself, I was very focused on being sure we did a good job. But I was hugely fond of the Queen and at one point when I was right by her coffin I thought, ‘I will never see you again.’ I felt a shock of grief.”

FOR TELEVISION VIEWERS of such occasions, everything appears to run on rails, even though common sense dictates this cannot always be the case. Dr Hoyle experienced such a situation that day.

“I won’t tell you what it was, but there was a moment during the state funeral when things were not going as I expected. Someone near me was getting a bit anxious. I thought, ‘Everyone knows what they’re doing. I’m going to wait.’ And it was fine. You know you are surrounded by people who won’t drop the ball. It’s our job to stay confident in the moments when we’re thinking, ‘This should be happening and it isn’t.’”

IN POSITION

Dr David Hoyle at the Queen’s state funeral and (above) with Charles and Camilla in 2020

He likes to share these small secrets. Outside his first-floor office before our interview begins, he pauses next to what appears to be a cupboard door, asking conspiratorially: “Would you like to take a look?” He watches with enjoyment as you enter not a cupboard, but a large balcony within the Abbey itself. Thirty feet below in the nave, tourists are filing in at the Great West Door and gazing in awe at the Tomb of the Unknown Warrior. This balcony is Abbots Pew, where the State Trumpeters of the Household Cavalry and the Fanfare Trumpeters of the Royal Air Force will be stationed on 6 May.

SINCE THE DATE was announced last October, Dr Hoyle’s life has been a whirl of meetings. No guidance is available from the organisers of the last coronation in 1953, as none is still living – although the four-year-old boy who would become Charles III was present that day. Dr Hoyle has met the King and Queen Camilla “ten times or more”.

“For example, very soon after the Queen’s death, I needed to speak with the King about his mother’s funeral. At Buckingham Palace, I ended up behind the barriers with many people in front of me, and had to wave at a policeman. I explained I had an audience with His Majesty, and everyone around me went, ‘Ooooooh.’ The policeman said, ‘I have no idea if you’re telling the truth. Shall we see how far we get?’ He was quite pleased when it turned out I was expected.”

Coronation Day will see Dr Hoyle rise at 6am to be on the Abbey floor long before the doors open. He will welcome the great and good, and after the ceremony hear their thoughts as they wait to leave. He and his wife Janet, a retired primary school head teacher, along with their 29-year-old daughter Katy, will host an evening party in the Deanery for 70 colleagues. His son Mike, 31, “is going to a gig somewhere”.

“Lots of Deans of Westminster before me thought they might do a coronation and didn’t, but it has always been in the back of my mind,” says Dr Hoyle. “People may not know what to expect. It needs to be a spectacle – something that gets hold of your attention, is seen and understood. It ought to be a moment when the nation and Commonwealth gather together around something.

“It’s a big ask – the Abbey is a Christian space and not everyone is Christian, while this is a coronation and not everyone is a monarchist. But it would be really good if people could see the spectacle, come together and find some common ground. The Abbey is a gathering place and there is a story we can share here. It will be magnificent.”

CORONATION ISSUE

The Coronation

Saturday from 7.30am BBC1

AS DAY FOLLOWS night and as the continuation of the British monarchy rolls ever on, one might have assumed that Kirsty Young was the obvious choice to anchor the BBC's coverage of the coronation of King Charles III. After all, she did the job at the state funeral of Queen Elizabeth II sensitively and confidently. Yet the fact is that even people as competent and experienced as Young are sometimes not as confident as we think they ought to be.

"Well, after the funeral and as time marched on, I wondered if I would get the call," she tells me. "After all, I'm not contracted to the BBC. I knew it was a hot ticket, and that there would be plenty of other people to consider." Even since getting the call, her lack of confidence still makes itself felt. "I just hope people don't think, 'Ooh, not her again.'" What? When your on-screen presence and carefully chosen words at the Queen's funeral seemed to summarise what the nation, even the world, was feeling and your valedictory address went viral? Come on.

Admittedly, before she was hired to present the state funeral and previously the Queen's Platinum Jubilee, Young had been off our screens for about four years while recovering from chronic fibromyalgia, which causes widespread pain, and rheumatoid arthritis. She was advised by doctors to take a significant period of deep rest and remove all potential stress factors from her life, to allow the medication she was prescribed to do its work. Her life had to be completely reframed; she had to step away from Desert Island Discs, which she had presented for 12 years, and call a stop to all other projects.

'I just hope people don't think, Ooh, not her again'

Returning to live broadcasting was clearly daunting. "As the Platinum Jubilee got closer, I felt like someone who hadn't done the school run for four years facing Brands Hatch. But once I started, the muscle memory kicked in. Live broadcasting is a thrill, so when they asked me to do it, I thought, 'Well, I will regret turning this down. It will never happen again, and the live events team at the BBC is as good as it gets.' This was a one-off."

Hence viewers were treated once more to Young's husky tones while the nation thanked Her Majesty for all those years. And then again, only a few months later, for the solemnity as the royal coffin came down that long, long avenue at Windsor. What moment is she doing the most to prepare for at this critical juncture in the long history of British kings and queens?

“At the state funeral, it was the unexpected moments. When the Imperial Crown and all the state regalia was removed from the Queen’s coffin, and she was simply a woman who had passed away being buried, that moment hit me like a ton of bricks. I can’t predict which moment of the coronation will be like that, although I know that the sight of thousands of troops moving with absolute precision through London will carry its own special punch.”

Young will anchor coverage of the coronation from a studio at Buckingham Palace. Is she nervous? “Absolutely. Even though we will have a rehearsal, you won’t know what it’s like until it happens. Last year I was with David Dimbleby [who is not part of this year’s coronation coverage] after the funeral at St George’s Chapel in Windsor, and he said to me that he has never covered an event and not had significant nerves beforehand. And that genuinely made me feel better. Once I’m on air I’m nerve-free, but the weeks before are the worst bit.”

COMING BACK INTO the public realm after such a long, difficult illness has understandably meant that some things are not the same for Young, who will also host a live broadcast of the Windsor Castle concert on Sunday. “Talking about your health is boring, and many people have had a lot more to deal with than I have,” she says generously, “but it has had its own wearing effects.”

“Life, in your 50s [she is 54], gets very real, doesn’t it? You can dodge things in your 20s and 30s when everything is magnificent, but this is where growth comes. In your 50s, after you have gone through divorce or ill health, or both, you realise how levelling life is, and that there are things that come out of having to step away and reset. You look at life through a different ▷

◁ prism. And once I was in good enough shape to embrace the change, I wouldn't have had it any other way. Taking time off gave me time to read, and spend time with my children [two daughters, aged 17 and 23, with her husband, entrepreneur Nick Jones, to whom she's been married for 23 years, and two adult children of Jones's].

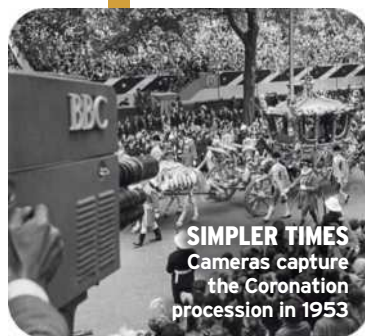

"Of course I was a parent before then, but now I have so much more space in my life. It really did help, making the time to do something different, it was far from all bad."

HER THOUGHTS ON the big day for the nation? "I think the idea that we are entering a different era is a very powerful one. It is a different moment and the King is occupying that space. Both he and the Queen look ready for it. They look like a team, and a very happy one."

Apart from (hopefully not) causing people to say, "Ooh, not her again", what does Young think she will bring to the day? "I'm there to put the event into words, and ask the questions that a typical viewer might ask. I am the viewer's way in. Because I will have a lot of information to hand I can extend the viewer's knowledge and then ask the questions they might want to ask. I can flesh out the whole thing, and make sense of it."

Finally, what will she be wearing? "I haven't given that a single thought. Nobody is going to be worrying about what I'm wearing." Really? How very confident, I think to myself.

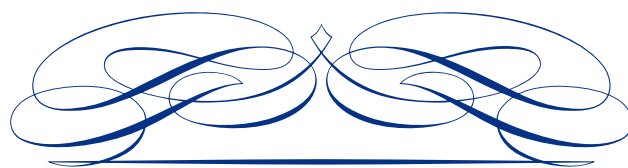

There are gales of laughter from Young. "Are you crazy? Of course I have thought about it, I have thought too much about it! I wanted to look special but, you know, not too Ta-daah. I definitely researched it and I'm happy to say I've found something I'm happy with, which will make me feel relaxed and special." Did her daughters help her? "On the day when I chose it, I ran it by them, and they said, 'We love it,' and I said, 'Good, because I've already bought it.'" There speaks a confident woman.

lens, to ensure Queen Elizabeth II's face could be clearly seen. This week, remote cameras will place viewers alongside the events in the Abbey, overhead cameras will capture the choreography, and airborne cameras will bring home the scale of the military ceremony.

The day will be one of spectacle – and it seems absolutely right that we find a way to ensure as many people as possible get to enjoy it. That is why I will be providing accessible commentary on the red button, for more than two million people living with sight loss in the UK. Members of the Royal National Institute of Blind People have told us they want the commentary to include all the day's key information – who is marching, what the choir is singing, the rich history of the occasion, the names of foreign heads of state and the King's guests. But I will also describe what I'm seeing – the lines of Windsor Grey horses, the bunting-wrapped crowd, the Sword of State, the St Edward's Crown and the smiles of the King and Queen. We will be on air for nearly six hours and we hope our marathon broadcast will extend the tradition of ensuring that the coronation can be enjoyed by the widest possible audience.

ROSIE MILLARD

RICHARD GRASSIE

So, HUW EDWARDS, let's not think about the King just now. Or the Queen. How will you be feeling on 6 May, as you prepare to be the voice of the BBC, a Richard Dimbleby for the modern age, presiding over the solemnities in Westminster Abbey, helping millions across the world to feel informed, educated and, at times, entertained?

"I feel excited and terrified, in equal measure," says the trusted news anchor, 61. "The scale of the event is daunting, because the more homework you do and the more that you watch the ground-breaking 1953 coverage of the coronation, which I have done at least half a dozen times, you understand today's scale is bigger than people realise. Even when the Palace talks about down-sizing, it's still an event of global interest, not only for the Commonwealth but further afield." He pauses. "There will be a big audience for it."

His biggest anxiety? "Well, the fact that it's a hybrid. It's a celebration of the crowning of a King and Queen, but also at the heart, this is a very solemn religious ceremony, with parts that the Archbishop of Canterbury would refer to as sacred. That is clearly not fun and games. There are even things in the service that you cannot show!" Ah, are you referring to the sacred anointing? He is. You can't show the sacred anointing, basically. Edwards will tell us why, on the big day.

'I've watched the 1953 coronation half a dozen times'

"You need to explain what's going to happen before it happens, so in the hours from 7.30am to the ceremony at 11am we will be explaining who is taking part, what will be going on, what the various bits of regalia are, and why we can't show parts of the ceremony because, when it's happening, I don't want to be talking over it."

This highlights one advantage that Edwards has over Richard Dimbleby, who commented on Elizabeth II's coronation in 1953. "His commentary stands the test of time," says Edwards. "But he was on air straight away explaining what was going on, while the service was happening, which is a tough gig. It's a different challenge to the one that I have."

So does Edwards feel ever so guilty about possibly nudging that other great royal commentator, Dimbleby Junior, out of the way for this very special gig?

"David Dimbleby is a gold-plated Rolls-Royce broadcaster," says Edwards diplomatically. "And I have so much to focus on I can't think about 'what ifs'. The big lesson in life is to do things your own way. Have the confidence to do it your way. That gives you authenticity."

Of course, if it was being done completely in the Huw Edwards way, one thing would get top billing. "I would mention the organ every 15 minutes," he says, with a twinkle. "It is a tremendous instrument, refurbished by Harrison & Harrison of Durham, as I'm sure you know. The list of music! Well, if it wasn't a coronation, you would be looking at one of the best concerts of all time. There are several choirs performing, the best in the country, and also Sir Bryn Terfyl. I'm looking forward to all of that."

Is he worried that people under, say, 30, might not be watching? After all, a recent YouGov poll suggests that young people don't care much for the monarchy. "Well, it's very difficult to draw broad conclusions from such a diverse group. Some will be watching with their families, or on social media, or just out of curiosity. There is a lot of money going into coverage on social media, which is absolutely right. The BBC would be crazy not to invest in those platforms."

MORE PERTINENTLY, WHAT about the endless soap opera that is the House of Windsor? Will he be mentioning Prince Harry? The absence of Meghan? The presence of Queen Camilla's ex-husband? The very name Prince Andrew? "Everyone knows the context and the history. It's not for me to offer my views on individuals." Does Edwards think Prince Andrew will be at the ceremony? "I'm assuming he will. I haven't seen a guest list. There has been no suggestion that he's not going. For me, it will be just a matter of remarking that he's there. I'm more focused on adding information. Viewers will be wanting to be told the names of people they don't know. The guest list will represent all the interests and charities the King has had over the years – such as the Prince's Trust, which has represented one of the greatest contributions to youth development in the last half-century."

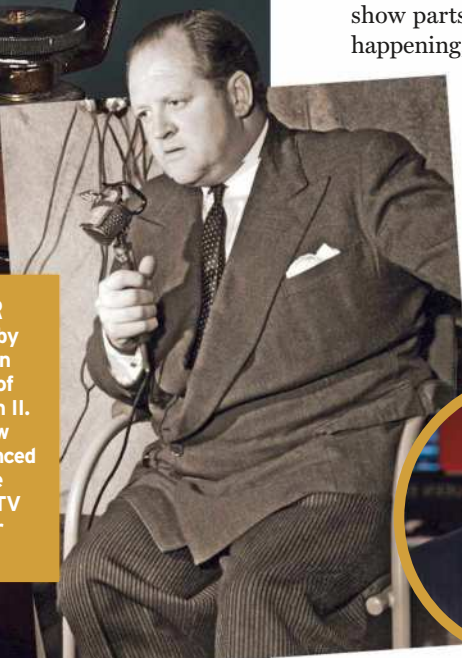

What keeps him awake at night? An immediate answer: "Getting the balance right. I don't want to be talking over too much of the music. I want to be in a position – and hopefully after the dress rehearsal I will be – to be precise about when I want to speak. I don't want to be talking over the Archbishop, or an important part of the ceremony." He sighs. "My big concern is to help people enjoy and understand what's going on." A pause. "Because you know I'm Welsh, and therefore always concerned."

Oh, Huw, you'll be fine.

How did Camilla Parker Bowles go from “the other woman” to Queen? Kay Burley of Sky News has been watching the story unfold for more than 40 years...

INTERVIEW BY
KATE BATTERSBY

HALF AN HOUR after coming off the air from her eponymous breakfast show on Sky News, Kay Burley is musing on how the world turns. We are sitting in a tiny sixth-floor turret room, close by the Houses of Parliament, atop the building in central London that's shared by Sky News and other broadcasters. Clearly visible in the panoramic view barely 300 yards away is the roofline of Westminster Abbey, where King Charles III and Queen Camilla will be crowned.

“Queen Camilla – who would have thought it?” says Burley. “Thirty years ago, we had this preconceived idea of an ‘evil woman’ who had split up a fairy-tale couple. She would never be Queen Camilla, we thought, because look what she had done. It took her a long time to change that.”

Burley's career has run parallel to the pivotal landmarks along Charles and Camilla's path. Through the decades, public opinion towards Camilla has softened in common with her own – a view informed by Burley meeting the woman herself “three or four times” at official receptions. “I loved Diana,” she says unequivocally. “I felt she died running round Europe looking for someone to love her.

I didn't know what to expect of Camilla before I met her. She turned out to be charming and disarming. I think she's beautiful. She tells good stories – although I can't repeat them. She's down to earth, funny and warm.”

In the run-up to the coronation, Burley is hosting a three-part Sky News podcast, Queen Camilla: for the Love of Charles, tracing Camilla's odyssey, while on Coronation Day itself she will be stationed among the crowds outside Buckingham Palace from 6am. She grins at the thought that it's 42 years since she first reported on one of the key moments in the King and Queen's journey – Charles's wedding to Diana in 1981. Among the guests in St Paul's Cathedral that day were Camilla and her husband Andrew Parker Bowles.

“I was a 20-year-old junior reporter on the Evening Post and Chronicle in Wigan,” says Burley. “From the office I wrote a report about how beautiful Diana was. When stories about Camilla's involvement with Charles emerged throughout the 1980s, I was disappointed – the prince running off with someone else wasn't part of the script. But it wasn't generally thought the marriage would actually break down until Diana chose to be photographed alone at the Taj Mahal in early 1992, by which time I'd been working at Sky for several years. She obviously was playing it for the photographers, but you could see the hurt on her face. Ten months later came their separation, which was unsurprising yet still shocking."

Those shocks kept coming. A private telephone call, the so-called "tampongate" tape, between Charles and Camilla from 1989 became public in 1993. Then in a 1994 interview the prince admitted adultery. The public response was overwhelmingly negative, yet he must have meant to achieve something by it – what, exactly? "The intention was to tell the world he loved someone else, the love of his life," says Burley. It was, she feels, the first step in an enormously lengthy strategy to bring Camilla with him on the path to the throne. "It was so very clever and well orchestrated. Hats off to the public relations team. They executed a brilliant plan – so cunning they could put a tail on it and call it a weasel."

At the time, however, Diana's own 1995 interview on Panorama, in which she described how "there were three of us in this marriage", played much better with viewers. "She was being Diana – coquettish, vulnerable, the nation's sweetheart. I wouldn't have done the interview in her place. It wasn't wise. You should never air your dirty linen in public."

BY 1996, BOTH Charles and Camilla were divorced. One year later came the shock of Diana's death. It would be 1999 before what Burley sees as the key moments in the public relations strategy resumed, under the watchful eye of PR guru Mark Bolland, the spin doctor Charles had hired to repair his and Camilla's reputation. The pair were pictured together in their first officially sanctioned photo opportunity as a couple, when they left the Ritz after her sister Annabel's 50th-birthday party. "That was massive," remembers Burley. "Charles was saying to the nation: 'Here she is. You're going to have to accept her because she's going nowhere.'"

The following year the Queen officially met Camilla for the first time, at a 60th-birthday party for ex-King Constantine of Greece hosted by Charles at his Gloucestershire home. "I'm sure the Queen and Camilla had met before that," says Burley. "Saying they met at that party was all part of the official narrative, like Charles and Camilla's first public kiss in 2001, at an event for the National Osteoporosis Society in London. That was when I realised she would be with him for life, although I'm not sure I thought she would be Queen."

Buckingham Palace appeared to recognise lingering public resistance when the couple married in 2005, declaring that Camilla would carry the title "Princess Consort" on Charles's accession to the throne. "A YouGov poll then said just seven per cent wanted Camilla to become Queen," says Burley. "Some people were delighted the Queen didn't attend the wedding, but the crowds I spoke with in Windsor when I covered the wedding were huge and very happy."

THEN JUST LAST year, the late Queen marked her Platinum Jubilee in February by declaring her "sincere wish" that Camilla be named Queen Consort whenever Charles took the throne.

"I think the Queen was wholeheartedly won round. We all trusted her, so when she endorsed Camilla it was huge – the final part of that very long game orchestrated by the royal household, beginning when Charles went to them many years previously and said: 'This is the woman who's going to be with me for the rest of my life. I'm going to be King. She is going to be my Queen. Sort it out.'"

Burley believes Camilla was not damaged by the publication of Prince Harry's autobiography this year, even though he described her as "dangerous" and "the villain" who "sacrificed me on her personal PR altar".

"Harry needs to have those conversations in private with his therapist," says Burley. "Now he is coming to the coronation, he will have to bow to Camilla. Any side show is just that."

"For years, all Camilla craved was the love of the man who filled her heart. She was prepared to wait and finally was rewarded. I think she was protected by him all the time she's been in the public domain. She is his first priority. They are completely content and at one with each other; and the monarchy will endure."

Crowning Camilla

When the crown is placed on the Queen's head, it will mark a great reversal of what happened to Edward VIII, says historian Kate Williams

ON 6 MAY, after the crowning of King Charles, Camilla will be crowned Queen of the United Kingdom and the other 14 countries that have the British monarch as Head of State. It marks the first time we've seen a queen consort so publicly invested since the coronation of George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1937.

It is a remarkable turnaround. When Charles and Camilla married in 2005, Buckingham Palace issued a statement that she would "use the title HRH the Princess Consort when the Prince of Wales accedes to the throne". The line then taken was that Camilla wouldn't be crowned nor bear the title of Queen. This was reiterated by Palace officials as recently as 2020.

Camilla was always referred to as the Duchess of Cornwall, never the Princess of Wales – although Catherine was dubbed the Princess of Wales when William began using the title of Prince of Wales in 2022. In 2005, the memory of his mother Diana's death was possibly too raw for it to be prudent for Camilla to use the title. And when it came to the question of Queen, the same sensibilities seem to have been at play.

MOREOVER, THERE WAS the historic question of divorce. In 1936, Edward VIII wanted to marry divorcee Mrs Wallis Simpson – a union deemed unacceptable by church or state. It was proposed that she could be his wife but not crowned or be Queen. Edward declared that he wished her to be "Empress of India and the whole bag of tricks", but the governments of the Empire couldn't agree on that, either – and so Edward gave up the throne. Nearly a century later in 2023, both the King and his wife have been divorced.

In 2010, an NBC interviewer asked Charles if Camilla would be Queen when he became King. Charles replied: "We'll see, won't we?" It seemed very likely that, behind closed doors, Charles was hoping that Camilla would be Queen. And then in 2022, in her Platinum Jubilee statement, Elizabeth II announced that it was her "sincere wish" that when Charles ascended, "Camilla will be known as Queen Consort". Now, as shown on the coronation invitations (right) and confirmed by the Palace, Camilla's title will be Queen Camilla.

Constitutionally, Camilla was automatically Queen as soon as Charles became King – as the wives of kings are queens. Thus, George IV's wife, Caroline, became Queen when he ascended the throne in 1820, even though he had spent most of his married life trying to divorce her. In the summer after George IV became King, Parliament introduced a bill depriving Caroline of her title of Queen Consort and allowing the King to get his way on grounds of adultery.

The votes were so close that the bill was withdrawn. It was, thus, impossible to remove the title of Queen from the King's wife unless they were divorced. George banned Caroline from the coronation, but she attempted to attend anyway, arriving at the doors of Westminster Abbey, demanding to be let in.

Ever since Eleanor of Aquitaine in 1154, queen consorts have been crowned with their husbands. Had Princess Diana still been living and separated, not divorced, from Charles, she would have been Queen. The principle that the queen consort was crowned was so ingrained that after Henry VIII had divorced Catherine of Aragon and married Anne Boleyn, Anne had her own personal coronation ceremony – in which she was even crowned with St Edward's crown.

Camilla will not be crowned with the crown of Queen Elizabeth (later known as the Queen Mother), which was used in 1937. This contentious crown contains the Koh-i-Noor, a diamond seized in 1849 from the 11-year-old Maharaja of the Sikh Empire, Duleep Singh, by the British East India Company. Accordingly, the diamond symbolises for many the oppressive practices of the Empire. To further complicate matters, several countries claim the diamond as their own. Camilla will instead be crowned with Queen Mary's crown, commissioned by the wife of George V for her coronation in 1911.

When that crown is placed on her head, it will be a great reversal from a century ago, when divorce made it impossible for Edward VIII to remain King. The immediate future line is one of kings and consorts, as the throne goes next to William, then George. Many of us will thus see further consorts be crowned, but not another Queen Regnant.

Kate Williams is a broadcaster, royal historian and Professor of Public Engagement with History at the University of Reading

CORONATION ISSUE

WERE IT NOT for a bashed-up hotel piano – so unloved it was used as a cutlery drawer – Debbie Wiseman might not have had the opportunity to compose music for the King's coronation.

At the request of Charles III, the musician has written two new pieces for the service: Alleluia (O Clap Your Hands) for the Choir of Westminster Abbey and organist Andrew Nethsingha; and Alleluia (O Sing Praises) for the Ascension Choir, the gospel choir that sang at the Duke and Duchess of Sussex's wedding.

This contribution is another highlight in a career spanning film (To Olivia), TV (Wolf Hall, Father Brown) and concert hall, writing and conducting for the Queen's Platinum Jubilee Celebration on ITV, and compositions for the BBC coverage of Her Majesty's State Funeral and the ten days of national mourning.

As a child, during a family holiday in Newquay, she spotted a piano for the first time in the "dining room of a pea-sized hotel. It's interesting how little moments in your life are so important," says Wiseman, who turns 60 this week. "It was an old upright and hadn't been played for ages. Going down for breakfast, I bashed at the piano every morning. It must have been annoying for everyone. Unlike King Charles, the hotel owners didn't have a passion for music," Wiseman laughs. "The memory of a waiter opening the lid and taking out a spoon has stuck with me for ever."

After the family returned home to north London, Wiseman's mother acquired a piano on hire purchase but only after "a big kerfuffle" with her father "because we lived in a tiny house". But Wiseman never looked back: "I did not move away from that piano. I was completely obsessed." Five decades on, the role of music in her life is "like breathing".

Wiseman received the "thrilling call" to compose music for the coronation just before Christmas. Her response? "A very quick yes!"

She's been inspired by the Abbey (where she has conducted) with its "huge acoustics" and both pieces "came fairly naturally", partly thanks to advice she received at music college. "I was told to write something every day. It keeps your compositional juices flowing. I've done that pretty much all my career, so even when I get a huge commission like this, I'll do what my teacher said – just write it, think of the occasion and enjoy it."

Wiseman hopes her compositions will convey a "joyful and celebratory occasion" and praises the King as "a much-needed advocate" for music and the arts. "Musicians have really struggled, particularly over the last couple of years, because they didn't know where their next gig was coming from. Their diaries during the pandemic were empty... When the work stops, it stops, and a lot of musicians live hand to mouth. So it's hugely important now to celebrate what we have. We're really good at music in this country."

Six orchestral, one organ and five choral pieces have been commissioned for the coronation by British composers. They include a new Coronation Anthem by Andrew Lloyd Webber.

The result, Wiseman says, will be a "snapshot of British musical culture... Along with the music of Vaughan Williams, Elgar, Handel and Hubert Parry and all of those composers that you'd expect to hear at a solemn state occasion – you've got 12 new commissions by living composers. That's what's so thrilling. It shows King Charles's passion for the arts and how much he wants to continue to support it."

Wiseman has met the King several times, including when he gave her an OBE in 2018 and at a reception following the Platinum Jubilee celebration at Windsor. He also presented her with a fellowship at the Royal College of Music. At a concert during the ceremony "he was sitting in the front row and completely entranced by the musicians – opera singers and a fantastic pianist and cellist. You could clearly see that he's got a huge passion for music, particularly classical music."

Wiseman is glad there's no snobbery about composing for TV and film in the music world, but she has a "bugbear" about some soundtracks. "If you have music all the way through a production, it becomes like wallpaper, and it doesn't have as much dramatic effect when it needs to. I'm never frightened of silence in a score and often say to directors, 'It works fine without music.' Only have music in a scene if it can add another dimension that isn't there on screen."

RAISING THE ROOF
The Choir of Westminster Abbey will sing Wiseman's Alleluia (O Clap Your Hands)

She is "sad" that closing credits on TV are often interrupted by continuity announcers. "They're so short now. You're rarely given more than 30 seconds, and they're spoken all over by the announcer. The audience doesn't have any time to reflect on what they've seen, listen to the music... let it sink in."

CURRENTLY WISEMAN IS writing music for a Hugh Bonneville spy thriller Lives in Secret, and series 11 of Father Brown. "We've done 110 episodes already and I've written music for every single programme since day one. It's such a treat."

Does she have an encyclopedic knowledge of the show? "Yes, I do! I watch each episode hundreds of times when I write the score. I study the actors in every scene, and every single flicker of their eyebrow, I'm writing music to. I watch it over and over again."

Wiseman says it is "heartbreaking that there isn't more support for music in schools. When you're playing with others in an orchestra or a chamber ensemble, or even if you're singing in a choir, it's so social. You learn how to listen, which is important generally in life."

It's a skill that has served Wiseman well.

Lighting a Sacred Fire

When Sarah Class wrote to Prince Charles, she didn't expect a reply – now she's composing for the King

It wasn't the most convenient time to have a "lightbulb moment" – but just as Sarah Class was dropping off to sleep, she had the idea for a composition that will be heard by millions. The musician (who has penned scores for David Attenborough's flagship series natural history Madagascar and Africa) had been asked to compose a piece for the coronation three days before Christmas.

It was, she says, an "are you sitting down moment?" and she set her sights high. "I wanted to write the most beautiful piece I've ever written, a sacred work, with a sense of the protection of all beings, hope in these troubled times, the abundance of the natural world and a feeling of faith, love and unity."

However, the idea for the piece came to the Emmy-nominated composer, not while she was seated at her Bechstein piano but when she was tucked up in bed. "I had to wake myself up and get my recording device out," she says. "I often get great ideas when I'm dropping off to sleep. It's annoying but that's the time when all is quiet and it's almost like everything settles and you can hear much more clearly."

At the coronation, Class's composition Sacred Fire, with lyrics by poet Grahame Davies and imagery based on the Bible, will be sung by South African soprano Pretty Yende.

It will be a reunion of sorts after Class first met the then Prince of Wales when he visited her school on the Isle of Wight when she was a teenager. "I never would have thought that one day I'd be composing music for his coronation," she says.

Years later, having forged a career as a composer, she sent him a letter: "I wrote saying that I composed a lot of music for BBC Natural History programmes and that I was an ambassador for [international conservation charity] the World Land Trust, raising awareness for their campaigns through my music. I explained that I felt emotion in music can sell conservation.

'I sent him some music, too. I forgot about it completely'

"I sent him some music, too, then I forgot about the letter completely. It was about a month or six weeks later when I had a lovely letter in the post from him. I think he even apologised for the delay, which was so nice! I didn't really think in a million years that he would reply. He said that he also believed that emotion through music could convey the conservation message."

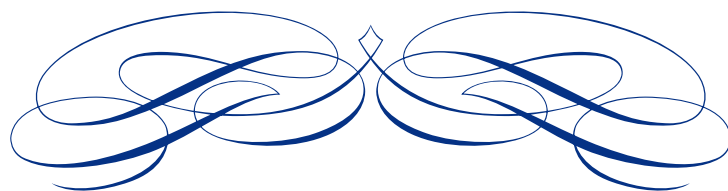

In 2021, the Prince asked Class to write a theme tune, Rhythm of the Earth, for his sustainable futures project at COP26, the United Nations Climate Change conference in Glasgow. "It was a dream come true, marrying my love of nature with music," Class says.

Her new composition, ringing through Westminster Abbey, will be another career highlight. "I was trying to create a bridge between the angelic realms – because, for me, music is very spiritual – and the human realms, and somehow convey all of this, and the emotion of the music. I hope Sacred Fire will be cinematic and epic." SN

Green King

Once ridiculed as a tree-hugger, Charles has spent 50 years campaigning for nature – he should continue to do so

SIR MICHAEL MORPURGO

IT WAS AT about the same time as the wonderful National Theatre production of War Horse that my wife Clare and I happened to find ourselves walking the countryside with the then Prince of Wales. We got talking about our mutual passion for nature, and in our case about the children who come to stay for a working week of their young lives at Farms for City Children, which by then had been our life's work for nearly 50 years, and continues today. To date, we've had 100,000 children on the three farms the charity now runs in Devon, Pembrokeshire and Gloucestershire. I think I told him it was by far the best story I've ever written – and it happens to be true, not my usual fiction.

It wasn't difficult for the Prince, growing up as he had with a love of nature, to imagine the impact such a week can have on young lives. The children leave with a new knowledge and understanding of where their food comes from, of the world around them. They might be out haymaking, checking the sheep or lambs, digging in the vegetable garden, grooming the horses or picking up the eggs and feeding the hens.

Look up and they might see a couple of mewing buzzards, or swallows swooping overhead. Walk along the river and they could see a heron rising, or a flurry of ducks taking off. They take it all in, marvel at it and remember it. Moments like those become part of their lives and are sometimes genuinely life-changing. They know they are part of this, that it is their world to enjoy and to care for. It is an important realisation.

We talked probably too much about all this, but the Prince listened intently. He's a great listener. I went on about how the children dig up potatoes for the first time, and as they eat them, because they dug them up themselves, they feel connected to them. It's the same with the eggs they eat. Often, they'll write their name on the egg they've picked up from under the hen that morning so they can have it for breakfast.

It is this connection that has been broken over the generations, this personal nature of the relationship between us and what we eat, which is so important to recapture.

King Charles is of my generation, but had more foresight about this lack of connection than me, and millions of others like me. He was telling us early on, in his 20s, that we were despoiling the planet, the rivers, the countryside, the air we breathe. He told us, and many mocked him mercilessly, ridiculing him as a "tree-hugger".

Like David Attenborough and now Greta Thunberg, he was looking us in the eye and telling us, "This is our world, and we are not here just to get fat and comfortable off it. We need to look after it. We must look after it, because it looks after us." That has been his passion throughout his life, and I'm full of admiration for his determination and commitment to the saving of our planet.

He wasn't afraid of telling people of his love for nature, admitting even that he talked to plants. He was lampooned for it, of course. Most of us have learnt that there's nothing wrong with that. That acceptance that we are all living creatures, all interdependent, on this planet, is the basis of all he has been trying to do to restore our relationship with the world about us, to restore the connections.

I'VE WITNESSED IN others the joy of discovering our closeness to all our fellow creatures, to the plant life around us on this earth. I see the deep pleasure in the face of my wife when she is looking out of the kitchen window at our bird table and watching the goldfinches and chaffinches flying in. I know the pleasure I have in growing and picking vegetables. I feel part of everything around me, that I belong. She feels the same. We know how good for us it is to feel this strong sense of belonging, of togetherness.

King Charles has been speaking of all this for a long time. He was brave to do so. And he was right. We know now that he has been very much a prophet in his own land. At 21, just a year after his investiture as Prince of Wales, he used his first public speech to express concerns about the pollution of our rivers and our seas, and warned of the growing mountain of plastic pollution. And, sadly, little of this has been put right even now. In many respects, it's worse.

There are some who say that now he is King, he should keep out of the climate change issue, that it's too political. I'm sure he knows that, > and that he will be speaking out differently. But for all our sakes and the sake of the good Earth, I hope he goes on speaking out, making his point. And I feel he must not be discouraged from doing this.

The health of our environment, the danger of global warming, is certainly no longer merely a political issue, so it is perfectly legitimate for the King to speak of it. What is political is the question of how it is to be resolved, the speed of the retreat from coal and oil, for instance. The King knows the difference. It can only be helpful to the effort to sustain our planet Earth if the King continues to speak out and set an example for us all, which he does and has done for some time.

WE CAN ALL do something to help sustain our planet in our own small way, in our own lives. Do we really need to fly in strawberries and blueberries across the world in February? No, we didn't before, and it didn't kill us. We have bought into this idea over recent years that we can go to the supermarket and buy all these things all the time with little thought as to how it is affecting our planet.

We should, we know, eat the produce that is grown as close as possible to where we live. And in Devon where I live, we grow lots of leeks and potatoes. So we eat a lot of leek and potato soup, with croutons – delicious! It is no bad thing to have a new king to remind us that flying stuff around the world when we don't need to is not a good idea, who will remind us of these things from time to time, even when we don't want to be reminded.

Queen Camilla has also proved to be a power for good in the land. She has been, in recent years, a fantastic ambassador for literature, a great ally in support of raising the profile of reading, particularly when it comes to children. She has worked tirelessly in this least prestigious, much neglected but most important, area of the arts.

Our language is maybe the greatest legacy we have left to the world in this country. We have given to the world wonderful literature and extraordinary theatre. Yet, in Shakespeare's country, one in four primary schools has no library, and there are far too many homes where there are no books. While this dreadful and shameful neglect continues, we do at least now have someone in the royal household who speaks up powerfully for books and the joy of reading.

Not long ago, Charles and Camilla made a visit to our little village of 80 souls in deepest Devon. I had done a programme on Radio 4, A Point of View, during the early days of the pandemic, about how our little village was a wonderful place to live, because people genuinely looked after each other, and how important it was especially at that time, because loneliness among old people in particular was becoming so hard to bear.

At the pub in my village, in order to combat this sense of isolation, the old age pensioners would come for lunch once a fortnight at a price everyone could afford and have a get-together. I said in my radio piece how beneficial this was for our old people. Someone at the Palace must have heard the programme, and rang to ask whether the then Prince of Wales and his wife could come and have lunch with all our pensioners.

So they came, the village's first royal visit for 1,000 years, and we all sat down with them to lunch in the garden of the pub and had a fine old time. It gave me a great insight into how genuine, kind and interested they are as people, and it will never be forgotten in the village. That's for sure.

It was partly because of that extraordinary visit that I sat down a year or so later to write The Boy Who Would Be King. It's a fairy tale of sorts about a little boy who knows he's going to be king when he grows up, and who has a passion for nature and wildlife. I hope he likes it. I hope they both like it.

Deborah Roberts is a Senior National Affairs Correspondent for ABC News and is based in New York. She travelled to London to cover Harry and Meghan's wedding, the Platinum Jubilee and the Queen's funeral – and now she's back to report on King Charles's coronation. So, a very good person to ask what she and her fellow Americans think about the proceedings from across the pond...

What do Americans think of King Charles?

We all know that Charles's popularity is not the same as his mother's. He's austere and a little bit standoffish – his mother was, too, but we didn't have a lot of female heads of state around the world when she was ruling. People regarded her with a lot of esteem because of the way she handled herself.

According to one poll, nearly 70 per cent of Americans viewed Queen Elizabeth II favourably. This was a woman who had this title thrust upon her, made the most of it over the years, and was a trailblazer. The notion of a king brings something a little heavier and more outdated to a lot of people than a queen.

What about Camilla?

Charles is a man who a lot of people associate with breaking Princess Diana's heart, and Camilla is going to be referred to as Queen, not Queen Consort, so there's that feeling that another woman is taking Diana's place next to the king on the throne.

Do you enjoy covering royal events?

I kind of do. The Queen's Platinum Jubilee was a particularly special time. I was so envious, because you could see people coming together in the UK, whether they liked the monarchy or not. Nobody knows how to throw a party like the Brits, or the royals. The coronation is an opportunity to have a celebratory moment. That is something we don't have a chance to do here in the US, particularly right now, because we're in a very polarised political environment.

Why do you think you're the go-to person for royal events?

I grew up, like any American girl, thinking about princes and princesses, and as I got older, Princess Diana felt very relatable. I was intrigued by her and her life, and then the royal family and Queen Elizabeth II.

Like a lot of people, I've watched The Crown. It's so funny, because I'm a black American woman from the Deep South, so it's a little bit of a non sequitur, but I've jumped into covering royal events with interest and journalistic curiosity. I guess I got labelled as somebody who was a royal watcher.

Deborah Roberts (and her fascinators) is back to cover her fourth major royal event for ABC News

Hats off!

Deborah Roberts of ABC News on why Americans love a royal celebration

How will ABC be covering the coronation – will it be a big deal for viewers in the USA?

Three news anchors [including Roberts] will be coming from New York and we've got foreign correspondents already stationed in London, plus contributors Robert Jobson and Victoria Murphy. We'll be reporting in real time from Westminster Abbey, when it's 5am in New York.

The big question is: will Americans get up super early on a Saturday to watch this on television in the same way they did with the Queen's Platinum Jubilee [ABC received 3.4 million viewers], her funeral [3.1 million viewers] and Harry and Meghan's wedding [6.3 million viewers]?

When you covered Harry and Meghan's wedding in 2018, you brought over a suitcase #### of fascinators to wear on screen...

At the wedding I was based at the Mall in London all day, and every time I was on screen, I put on a different fascinator. I had a good hat-maker friend here [in New York], who came up with various ideas. One fascinator was a tea pot and one had ABC written on it [pictured right]. When I come over for the coronation, I'm going to make a stop at Rachel Trevor-Morgan Millinery, who was the Queen's hat-maker and who's become a friend.

THINK AHEAD
Roberts plans more hat-related inventiveness

Why do you think Americans are still fascinated by the monarchy?

It's one of those weird things where we pretend we don't really care and we don't really respect it, but we like looking at the monarchy because we can do it from afar, we can do it with criticism, we can pooh-poooh them. The royal family are just as messed up as any other family and we kind of like seeing that. They have squabbles, they have the black sheep of the family in every generation, some of them have decided to abdicate. But they still have a little pixie dust, a little magic, attached to them.

'There's a grudging envy of having something royal'

Do you think Americans have got over what happened to Princess Diana?

I was surprised that a lot of Americans haven't – for the most part, I think people still hold a grudge. They feel this woman wasn't treated well and that will probably endure for a while. Americans related to her, she held babies who were infected with Aids, she would do things off the cuff, she danced with John Travolta at the White House. She embodied that spirit of being carefree and promoting equality – she was as close to an American in the British royal family as somebody could imagine.

Can you explain why President Biden won't be coming for the coronation?

That's historically the way it has been. It's been 70 years since there was a coronation. Dwight D Eisenhower was the president then, and by protocol, he didn't come.

You could, of course, dispense with a president and have a monarch instead...

No, no, no, no! That's not something that would fly. One of the folks I talked to in the UK said, "We complain about the royals, but they're ours." Americans don't feel that kind of attachment, because at our core, we feel there's something wrong with the colonisation history, the lack of equality, and the hierarchy that comes with it.

There is a little grudging envy of having something royal, but Americans are like, "Nope, that's not us – that's them." We'll go over there and tour Buckingham Palace, but that's not who we are. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

A mug for a King

Radio Times's 1953 "Coronation Number" was something people kept to show their grandchildren – as were souvenir mugs, which first appeared at the coronation of Charles II in 1661! Among the most collectible items you might find today are mugs printed with "King Edward VIII". Woolworths sold out instantly when these appeared in the shops ahead of Edward's planned 1937 coronation, but his abdication meant the mugs now celebrate the king who was never crowned. Some merchandising wasn't designed for posterity: the Museum of London has an uneaten Chelsea bun that was baked in 1820 for George IV's coronation.

REPORTING HISTORY

Rude interruptions

Congregations in Westminster Abbey during coronation ceremonies haven't always behaved in a dignified manner. When the coronation of William the Conqueror took place on Christmas Day 1066, shouts of joy from his supporters at the moment of his crowning were so loud that they alarmed the guards outside. The soldiers assumed that enemies must be attacking, and in defence they set fire to the buildings around the Abbey. It had to be evacuated while the King hastily concluded the ceremony.

It's always a long day for coronation guests, who must get up very early and bring a snack for sustenance. It was traditional for the peers of the realm to hide sandwiches inside their mini-crowns or coronets. Some of those at George V's 1911 coronation, on a hot June day, feared that the butter in their sandwiches might melt and leak. During the coronation of George III in 1761, the Duke of Newcastle took a short break in the special restroom behind the high altar that had been prepared for George's wife, Queen Charlotte. There he was most unfortunately discovered making use of the queen's private toilet.

Lipstick and pearls

Queen Elizabeth II had a reputation as a no-nonsense sort of girl, more interested in horses and dogs than fancy parties. On Coronation Day, the presence of TV cameras made make-up necessary, but she insisted it be as low-key as possible, applying her pinky-red lipstick herself rather than using a professional. The day involved several changes of clothes. Before the ceremony proper began, she was stripped down to a simple white dress that represented her prepared, purified state before she was presented with the items symbolising her power, including the robe, spurs, sword, sceptre, orb, ring and, finally, the crown.

The first coronation to be filmed was George VI's, in 1937, but only three cameras were present. In 1953, when the coronation was watched by 350 million people, more than 750 commentators, observers, engineers and supporting staff were employed for the day by the BBC. A Canberra jet bomber stood by so that film of the event could be taken to the United States and Canada that very same evening.

A bumpy ride

In medieval times, the grand procession bringing the monarch to the Abbey for crowning would begin at the Tower of London, symbol of the might of the state, and the place where the Crown Jewels are safely stored. The Gold State Coach used today was made for George III in 1762. Gilded Tritons guard each of its corners, celebrating Britain's 18th-century naval victories. Eight horses draw the coach, and its lumbering movement is uncomfortable for the passengers. "Very jolty" was young Princess Elizabeth's description, after riding in it to her father George VI's coronation. It's even been reported to make its occupants feel slightly seasick. Hopefully the new King and Queen will be steeled for a bumpy return to Buckingham Palace!

Tears for souvenirs

With so many thousands of people involved, coronations can provoke euphoria and unintended comedy, but also deep emotion. The actual moment of crowning leaves a deep impression on those who witness it. "Most of the ladies cried and I felt I should not forget it as long as I lived," recorded one guest at Victoria's coronation.

Winston Churchill was concerned that Elizabeth II's coronation should not be stripped of its dignity by being treated as a "theatrical performance". Although cameras were allowed into Westminster Abbey, the vital moment when the Queen was consecrated was kept private and out of sight, a decision King Charles will emulate on 6 May. Monarchs know – in the words of Victorian writer Walter Bagehot – not to "let in daylight on magic".

Tripping over history

"I was awake at four o'clock by the guns in the Park, and could not get much sleep afterwards on account of the noise of the people, bands, etc," wrote Queen Victoria in her own account of her coronation day in June 1838. She was only 19 years old, and one spectator at the Abbey said that "the Queen came in as gay as a lark, and looking like a girl on her birthday".

A new and lighter crown of state had been made for her little head but, even so, the weight of it gave her a headache. A mishap occurred in the ceremony when Lord Rolle, an elderly peer, tripped as he climbed the steps to the throne. Victoria leapt up to help him, her spontaneous action earning her a round of applause. A pundit from America gravely passed onto his countrymen his misapprehension that "the Lords Rolle held their title on the condition of performing the feat at every coronation".

Victoria's subjects were delighted to hear that, when she got back to Buckingham Palace, the young queen rushed to give her little dog Dash a bath.

MALNUTRITION APPEAL

TREATING MALNUTRITION IS ABOUT MORE THAN FOOD. IT'S ABOUT MEDICAL CARE.

DR JENNA BROOME IS A DOCTOR RECENTLY RETURNED FROM ETHIOPIA

"The malnutrition crisis in Ethiopia is the worst I've ever seen. You walk into our feeding centres and there are malnourished children everywhere. All our beds are full, family members are sleeping on the floors, mattresses line the corridors and, every day, more desperately ill people arrive. We just can't turn anybody away.

People walk for miles to get to us, carrying their children. We see kids brought in who are really sick, almost at the point where they won't survive. But with just a little bit of care and some focused treatment, we see them turn around. We give them antibiotics, oxygen and blood transfusions and, once they are stabilised, start them on therapeutic food and they begin to get better. You see their personalities come back, they start to smile, they come alive again.

It's the best feeling in the world witnessing something like that, watching kids who could barely lift their heads a few weeks earlier running and playing. It's so moving to see parents having their little ones restored to them.

Malnutrition isn't just hunger. These children have an inability to fight off infectious disease because their immune systems have been so compromised that they need a whole range of medical care.

But one thing I've learned working for MSF is that it doesn't take that much to combat malnutrition. With the right treatment and care, kids can really bounce back. You don't need a lot of fancy kit. You need antibiotics, vaccinations, basic medical equipment, therapeutic food, and doctors and nurses who can do the work. You can do an awful lot with very little.

It's completely unacceptable that children are still dying of starvation in 2023 when it's so treatable and preventable. And it's not just in Ethiopia. In Nigeria, in South Sudan, in Somalia, MSF teams are treating men, women and children caught up in this ongoing malnutrition crisis.

If MSF wasn't there, many of these children would die. We need your support to keep reaching and treating people affected by this malnutrition crisis. We can't do it without you."

MALNUTRITION EMERGENCY

Conflict, poor weather conditions and price rises are driving a deadly spike in malnutrition in many parts of the world. Children under five are most at risk. In Niger, Ethiopia, Nigeria, Somalia and South Sudan, MSF is operating specialised inpatient feeding centres and is providing critical care to paediatric patients with severe medical complications. Treating malnutrition with food is not enough. Young children with severe malnutrition can become extremely vulnerable to conditions they'd otherwise recover from. We need your support to provide the lifesaving medical care these children desperately need.

Everyone knows fairy tales don't come true, but days like these allow even seasoned royal reporters to believe they might

I DO HAVE some emergency made-in-China Union Jack bunting in the cellar, last deployed for the London Olympics.

I'm not sure it will make an appearance on our next Big Day. I'll see what the mood is. As I type, things are following their traditional pattern. There's not much excitement about the coronation in real life, but the media onslaught has begun. Every day we're drip-fed regal nuggets about quiche recipes, guest lists and dress codes.

Now that 6 May is almost upon us, Britain will be shifting into gear and duly going for it. And deniers will go about their business, expressing a total lack of interest. Good for them – they're as much a part of it all as the rest of us. Back in 1981, I was carried away by the TV coverage of the wedding of Charles and Diana – "It's all so romantic!" I gushed in my teenage diary (I never was very perceptive), then added crossly, "Dad spent all day in the garage."

Officially, the BBC is very proudly not a state broadcaster. However, there's little evidence of that in its coverage of royal occasions. I doubt we'll hear many dissenting voices on Coronation Day. The uncrowned King of the Valleys Huw Edwards will reign supreme, aided by Clare Balding, Kirsty Young and other brilliant broadcasters, all agreeing it's absolutely marvellous.

If the BBC's too forelock-tugging for you, try ITV or Sky, but I imagine the mood will be much the same there. You could argue that if we're going to have a monarchy, this is the only way to do it – in a full-bodied, positive fashion with no

five years ago

Diana's funeral, up a ladder in one of those broadcast huts in Royal Parks green. As the coffin went past, a woman below let out an explosive sob. The sight of 12-year-old Harry, head bowed, was too much for most of us.

MY LAST BBC royal assignment was Harry and Meghan's wedding in May 2018. I had an unglamorous position as part of a radio team in Windsor Great Park, and we reported for duty at dawn's chilly crack. Broadcasters are carefully corralled into secure areas with an unrestricted view, even when they are, like me, five foot one and a half. It seems a long time ago – but what a happy, positive day that was.

We now know far too much about the tensions behind the scenes but, on the ground, the mood was joyous, the sun was out, the crowd more diverse than any I'd ever seen at a royal occasion, and the chemical toilets worked a treat. When the happy couple came past, I lost all sense of journalistic perspective and waved at them. And they waved at me, I'm sure. I think my commentary consisted solely of the words "And here they come...!" Award-winning stuff. Who needs a Dimbleby?

The only sour note was that by the time we'd trudged back into town, the rumoured free bar for media operatives was no longer free. But we made the best of the challenging circumstances and bought our own drinks. Cheers! Enjoy the day. Even if you do spend all of it in the garage.

room for critics when the state coaches roll.

Let's be honest, most royal events are dull. As a baby local radio reporter, I was thrilled to trail behind the Queen and Prince Philip on a visit to Hereford in 1987. The Queen was a little distant but smiley; Philip was all action, interacting with the crowd and lifting children over barriers to present their posies. Just another day at the office. Ten years on, and I was on the Mall for Chris and Rosie Ramsey have mined their marriage to make the biggest podcast in Europe. But what's it really like to work with your other half?

STEPHEN
ARMSTRONG

MY FAVOURITE THING, and it happens a lot, is when someone's walking towards me with ear pods in and they shout, 'I'm listening to you now!' Rosie Ramsey beams. "I genuinely love it."

"The first time it happened was in London," husband Chris chips in. "I loved it less, it's fair to say. For one thing, I've been a comedian since 2007 and I don't even get recognised in London. And secondly, it was about two days before the first lockdown, so there was this virus, she was coming straight towards us in the street and it looked like Rosie was about to hug her. I was like, 'What are you doing?'"

They both burst out laughing. Podcast hosts, comedians and all-round celebrity couple Chris and Rosie Ramsey (36 and 35 respectively) laugh a lot, it turns out. It's infectious. They finish each other's sentences, build each other up, and cheerfully expose each other's flaws. It's why people come up to them in the street – and, in fact, within the Radio Times offices, where they were accosted by a pair of younger members of the team. "You should bottle this," I say after one extended riff – because against the odds, it seems like Chris and Rosie have found a way to forge a successful relationship within a very high-pressure environment.

Back in 2019, Chris Ramsey was a reasonably successful stand-up.

He'd been nominated for the Edinburgh Comedy Award and was booked for Strictly Come Dancing – but things were about to get bigger. He was prepping for a national tour and live streaming a video to boost ticket sales when Rosie, his wife, started heckling him online. As a former Capital Radio presenter, Pontins' blue coat, cabaret singer and announcer at Newcastle racecourse, she had just as much wit and bite as Chris – and went down a storm with his fans.

"When I was at Newcastle Arena on that tour, I mentioned her name and everyone cheered," he says. "We realised we had something and thought, what can we do together? A YouTube video? Something on Facebook? Then Rosie said "podcast" and I said no... something I'm reminded of regularly."

The result was the podcast *Sh**ged Married Annoyed*, which has had more than 140 million downloads since in 2019 – and its promoters claim it's the biggest in Europe. It has a loose format, but is really about the couple, their worldview and the nature of marriage. Every week, in the What's Your Beef? slot, Chris and Rosie each bring up something that has annoyed them and talk it through. There are also emails from listeners and plenty of the Ramseys being silly and making each other laugh.

"We didn't know there was any money in it," Rosie says. "We did it for free for a year, just off our own backs. We thought we'd do six episodes and if nobody listens, we'll just crack on doing our own thing."

But people did listen – and it spawned an empire. Today, they balance a weekly podcast with spin-off books, tours and a TV show – The Chris and Rosie Ramsey Show, now on BBC1 for its second series – plus parenting their two sons Robin, seven, and Rafe, two.

It's all based, essentially, on their relationship and all done together – so how do they manage to do it without falling out with each other? >

“It takes a lot of work, we’re not going to go, ‘It’s bliss, it’s great,’” Rosie shrugs. “But I think it helps that we have both worked in the performance industry all our lives, so we know how to turn it on and be professional.”

“Luckily we do get on very well and are happily married, not every single day, but we do have a very strong relationship. And we’re quite strict with work. The last year was a bit manic, and we could be talking about work at 6.30am while we’re doing the breakfast for the kids, so we’ve had to say stop...”

‘The podcast has helped us hugely. It’s like free marriage counselling’

CHRIS RAMSEY

Chris picks up the thread. “It’s not healthy... so it’s breakfast, shower, get the kids to school get in the studio or the office at 9.00am and talk about it then,” he explains. “Rosie has enforced that on me and it’s a mint idea. But the podcast has helped hugely in our relationship. The communication that we have with each other on that, it’s like free marriage counselling. So when we know the kids are safe, put our phones on flight mode and do the podcast, making each other laugh for an hour and a half, you think, ‘Do you know what...’”

Rosie cuts in. “It’s quite nice, isn’t it?”

The on-air beefs are real gripes, although the Ramseys prefer to let them “marinate”, as Chris describes it, because some rows are too raw to go straight on air and have to settle for a couple of weeks.

“This is the only relationship I’ve had where I actually will laugh and apologise about something that I’ve done,” Rosie says, in a tone of mild surprise. “At the time I thought I was right

AT HOME
The couple with their sons Rafe and Robin but then, in a week, you have a laugh and go, ‘Yeah I was out of order.’”

“I still can’t believe when I get her to apologise. It’s like winning an Oscar,” Chris says.

So if the podcast didn’t exist, would the arguments fester?

Chris suspects they would. “We didn’t argue until we had kids and we started the podcast when Robin was three,” he points out. “No one talks about how stressful it is; it’s really difficult. You’ve always got to preface that with, ‘But my children are the best thing that happened to us, I love them.’ Because we do. I might slag them off, but I would die for them in a second.”

The kids, however, have turned out to be the one thing that both Chris and Rosie are increasingly wary about sharing on the podcast. “It’s got to be their choice and they’ve got to be old enough to make that choice,” Chris explains.

“But I’ll tell you, the main reason we don’t have the kids on the TV show is because when we come down to London [from their home in Northumberland], that’s our time,” Chris laughs. “That’s a nice hotel, that’s room service, that’s a lie-in. You think we’re bringing a seven-year-old three hours on the train? Wash your mouth out.”

The Ramseys’ natural flow is perfect for podcasts, but the duo admit they were concerned at transferring it to television when they took their show to BBC2 last year. “TV likes rehearsals and us being rehearsed just wouldn’t work,” Rosie says. “But luckily, we did a live tour before the TV show, and we learnt how to keep the spontaneity.”

WHILE CHRIS WAS well known before, the success of the Ramsey double act has pushed them both higher up the fame tree than he could have managed on his own. “If I released a podcast by myself or with another comedian, I would never have done those numbers,” he says.

And as Rosie is now catching up with him on guest TV appearances, having joined the Strictly Christmas special last year, do they ever get jealous of the other?

There’s a slightly awkward pause – for a second, I wonder if we’ve found a sore spot in their relationship after all.

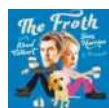

“We do get jealous of the time off the other one gets,” Chris admits, eventually. “Rosie’s doing a show this week, so I go home to the kids and she gets a night in a posh hotel.”

“I do like to post pictures on Instagram of the hotel bathroom just about the time he’s getting the kids in the bath,” Rosie grins mischievously. “That’s true jealousy right there.”

A Beatle's home, a stage star's dress and a wartime model...
A new BBC2 series goes behind the scenes with restorers at the National Trust

Paul McCartney's childhood home at 20 Forthlin Road, Liverpool

NOT EVERY NATIONAL Trust property is a country pile or architectural marvel. Even so, one particular Liverpool council house proved a contentious purchase. Bought in 1955 by Mary and Jim McCartney, 20 Forthlin Road was acquired by the Trust in 1995, long after their son Paul's band the Beatles had secured its spot in the country's musical history – and yet still there was hesitation.

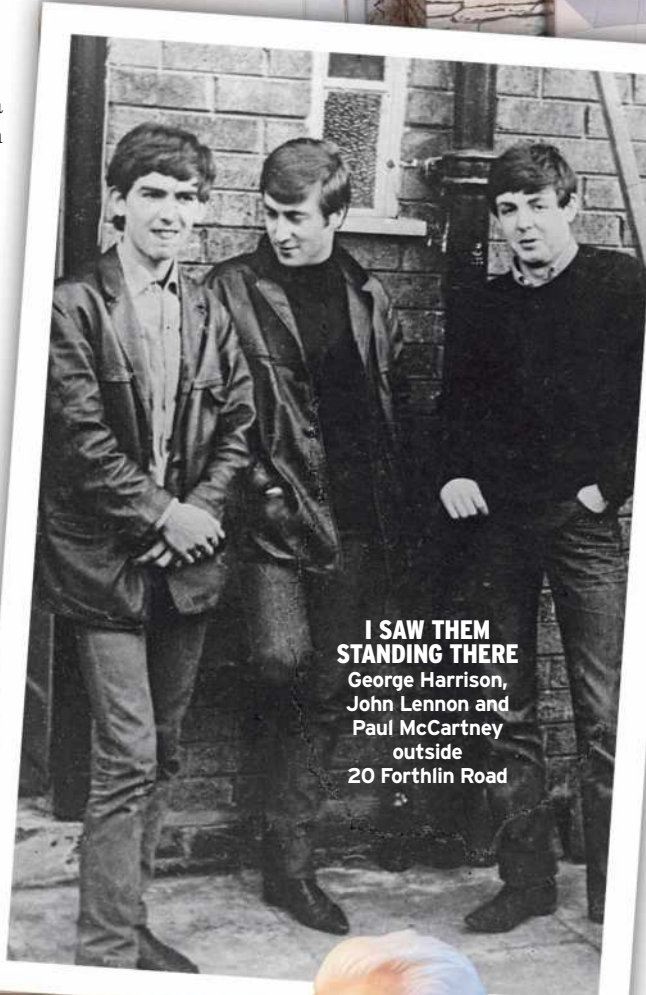

Paul's brother Michael recalls "two posh gentlemen" from the National Trust taking a look around the house and being less than impressed, as the family who had lived in it after his parents had installed "double glazing, a posh kitchen, posh carpets and so on". "It was a very modern, very boring house and the disinterest was extraordinary."

Michael showed the National Trust photos he'd taken when he lived in the house. "They saw sash windows and a Belfast sink and so on, and said, 'If we can have these photographs, we can source what it was like.' So that's what happened, and they've dealt with it with such dignity and class. Even little houses like this can produce gems as worthy of a visit as the big stately homes."

Some of the last century's finest songs were written, fine-tuned or rehearsed at 20 Forthlin Road, including I Saw Her Standing There (written knee-to-knee with John Lennon in the living room) and When I'm Sixty-Four, although it was the impact of those songs, the subsequent Beatlemania and an endless stream of screaming visitors that eventually forced the McCartneys to move out in 1964.

Paul McCartney's last visit was in 2018, in the company of James Corden for the latter's Carpool Karaoke. Michael had also been back once, but something had niggled: the original fawn-coloured stone-effect wallpaper in the living room was missing. Michael's photos, with the wallpaper a backdrop to his brother strumming on the guitar, were subsequently used by the National Trust's team to re-create wallpaper that met with his approval. "We're right back there," he marvels. "I'm shocked in a great way, because it immediately takes you back."

A MORE DIFFICULT undertaking awaited in the upstairs bedroom where Mary died in 1956, aged 47. Paul memorialised the loss in his first song, I Lost My Little Girl, written aged 14 ("that, as they say, was the start of it," he wrote in last year's memoir-through-song The Lyrics), but Mary's presence can be felt in many of his songs, from Let It Be to Lady Madonna.

The brothers had long requested that the room be kept out of bounds to the public. "The fact that our mother died there is why I said to them, for years, that my mum and dad's room was sacrosanct," says Michael. "I refused to let anybody in. It was too personal, too terrifying. That's where she slept."

Yet following several conversations, they reconsidered. "I discussed it with our kid and we agreed that it's important, because there are lots of photographs of my dad, who lived through Beatlemania, and Mum had never been recognised. We thought that would be nice as a homage, as long as it was done discreetly. Visitors are now going into Mum and Dad's bedroom and treating it with absolute respect. That's what we both wanted: to acknowledge our beautiful mum and her memory."

With the National Trust sourcing period-appropriate furniture, rosary beads (Mary was a devout Catholic) and an ashtray (both parents smoked), Michael was delighted with the results that, for him, now complete the two-storey, terraced house.

"As you come out of the house, there's a little wooden plaque installed by the National Trust: 'In loving memory of Mum and Dad, Mary and Jim'. That says it all." GABRIEL TATE

DRAMA

Conservators

Ellen Terry's Beetle Wing

Dame Ellen Terry's Beetle Wing dress

Largely forgotten today, Dame Ellen Terry was an actor of global renown in the late Victorian era, famed for her performances in Shakespeare and Ibsen, and an intimate of Oscar Wilde and John Singer Sargent.

"You could compare her to someone like Judi Dench or Helen Mirren, known for their integrity and classical repertoire as an actor," says Susannah Mayor, senior collections and house officer at Dame Ellen's Kentish home of Smallhythe Place. "But it goes beyond that. She was a most charismatic, beneficent woman who was in charge of her career, her money, and her life."

Among the collection's highlights are Dame Ellen's Beetle Wing dress and accompanying velvet cloak, which she wore as Lady Macbeth in 1888. While the dress was restored over a decade ago, the cloak was showing understandable wear and tear, especially around the hemline. A mammoth sewing and cleaning project ensued, taking over 450 hours.

"This dress is very special, made of a green crocheted wool with a silver thread running through it, and the beetle wings sewn onto it give an iridescent blue-green reflection," says Mayor. "It was designed to look almost like a serpent. It's beautiful to see on a dummy behind glass, but what it must have been to witness its entrance onto the stage at the Lyceum... wow!"

Why has Dame Ellen been neglected? "It's interesting. Had she had an affair with Edward VII or had a theatre named after her, things may have been different. Before film, actors didn't leave much behind other than other people's impressions of them. I hope we can bring her amazing story to more people." GT

Winston Churchill's model of a Mulberry harbour

Chartwell, Winston Churchill's Kent home from 1922 until his death in 1965, is overflowing with items of historical importance. Yet for curator Katherine Carter, there was one item from 1944 that was both singularly significant and in need of repair – a model of a Mulberry harbour, one of the floating harbours created for D-Day that enabled the Allies to unload cargo and vehicles onto the Normandy beaches in quantity and at speed.

"Our understanding had been that it was created as a decorative item and given to Churchill at the end of the Second World War. But as a result of research I did, we identified it as a model that was created by the War Office and used in the planning of D-Day itself," says Carter. "That makes it so important, not just in terms of the story of Churchill and his wartime leadership, but the conduct of the war itself. It's an important record, as well as a beautiful object."

UNIQUE ARTWORK

The model of a Mulberry harbour in the library at Chartwell, former home of Winston Churchill (below)

The contoured, three-dimensional model referred to Gold Beach and would have been placed flat on tables for strategic planning, so its second incarnation as an artwork hung on the wall of Chartwell's library exposed it to unanticipated pressures. Cracks appeared, hot lights loosened adhesives, fathom markers slipped and ships came adrift.

"We don't have many objects with a real functional purpose which then become decorative works of art," says Carter. "It's a really complex object, but our conservator has done a beautiful job. It really brings home how Churchill would have known it." GT

FOOTBALL

ARE CITY THE REAL DEAL?

Can Man City's genius overcome Real Madrid's Champions League arrogance, asks Simon Barnes

Real Madrid v Manchester City. Entitlement v Excellence. The Champions League semi-final between the champions of Spain and England presents us with a complex culture clash. It's a reprise of last year's semis, when Entitlement did what Entitlement traditionally does: which is to carry the day in the face of its own basic ineptitude.

The second semi is the Milan derby, AC Milan v Inter, and it already looks like the two Italian sides will be playing to see who will come second in the final – although one shouldn't be dogmatic about any football match.

But Real Madrid v City has caught the eye of everyone who doesn't live in Milan, and it has forced us to confront two contradictory facts. The first is that Manchester City are even better than they were last year and clearly a better team than Real; the second is that Real almost always win the Champions League. They simply expect to lift the trophy. They may not be the best side in the competition, but they assume they will find the big save when it matters and the big goal at the right time. After all, they always do. Of course they will win – they're Real.

'City are hampered by the knowledge that this is their time'

Los Blancos, as the Spaniards are known, have won the Champions League/European Cup 14 times, twice as many as any other club. And they've won five of the past nine.

Last year, City comprehensively outplayed Real in their semi-final – and yet Real still beat them. City had won an exhilarating first leg at home 4–3 and were leading 1–0 (5–3 on aggregate) in the return leg at the Bernabéu with only a minute of the 90 left. All they had to do was to play out the final few moments of time added on without conceding two goals. You'd have put the mortgage on it.

And yet somehow those two goals happened.

GOAL MACHINE
Manchester City striker Erling Haaland's goal gave them a 3–0 lead over Bayern Munich in the quarter-final first leg last month

Substitute winger Rodrygo scored them both with Real's first two shots on target to make it 5–5 and take the match into extra time. Karim Benzema then put away a penalty and that was that: another success of the kind that Real expect, and another heroic failure for City. Real went on to beat Liverpool 1–0 in the final.

EVERYONE SAYS IT'S going to be different this year. City are sounder defensively, with Rúben Dias quietly superb. Their manager, Pep Guardiola, is a tinkerer, but even he has been wooed by the idea of consistency – and has started City's past three Champions League matches with the same 11.

And this year they have Erling Haaland. Beyond scoring an astonishing number of goals – this season he has 12 in eight Champions League games – the big Norwegian makes City much harder to predict. They can play a million short-range passes, as they traditionally do, but these days they can also play a long pass (best not call it a long ball) out to Haaland. And that was exactly how they scored the goal that killed off their quarter-final tie against Bayern Munich in the first leg.

Guardiola came to City in 2016 and since then he and his players have worked and worked to achieve excellence. Real Madrid are on their fifth manager, Carlo Ancelotti, since 2016. They seem to have no long-term plan or coherent strategy, yet Ancelotti looked almost unsurprised as Real's sense of entitlement brought them victory in the Champions League final.

Their players are infinitely capable of making something from nothing – Vinícius Júnior, Benzema, Luka Modric – and should they win this semi-final over two legs, they will celebrate as a matter of routine.

City are hampered by the knowledge that this appears to be their time. Defeat would invalidate a season's worth of hope – and such stakes can secretly oppress all players.

Eternal striving after excellence? Or that eternal sense of entitlement? Let the football begin.

ADVENTURE

Peter Pan & Wendy ★★★

Available now

 Writer/director David Lowery previously helmed the terrific Pete's Dragon remake in 2016, and here he reimagines another Disney film, with charming results. The familiar story follows Wendy Darling (Ever Anderson) and her brothers as Peter Pan (Alexander Molony) leads them on a swashbuckling escapade to Neverland, where they battle formidable baddie Captain Hook (Jude Law). Although not as consistently enchanting as Lowery's best work, the film sees him injecting a real sense of wonder into the adventure, and Law excels as the wicked – but not necessarily irredeemable – villain. PATRICK CREMONA

MUSICAL COMEDY

The Muppets Mayhem

All 10 eps available from Wednesday

They're back! Or at least, the house band from the original Muppet Show have a new spin-off series. Dr Teeth and the Electric Mayhem have been on tour, but have never recorded an album. Could this be an opportunity for struggling record executive Nora (Lilly Singh) to score her big break? Not all the Muppets' recent TV reboots have worked, but this jovial musical sitcom is a hoot, ably mixing human and puppet characters and studding its script with sly gags about the golden era of rock 'n' roll. Look out for some great self-deprecating celebrity cameos, too. JACK SEALE

COMEDY

Not Dead Yet

Available from Wednesday

The American remake of Ghosts wasn't great, but this new sitcom's spin on the same basic idea – one character can see dead people – creates breezy, likeable comedy. Gina Rodriguez, once of Jane the Virgin fame, is a reporter who has taken an ill-advised career break and been demoted to writing obituaries, which is upsetting enough before the subjects of her tributes start haunting her and offering much-needed life advice.

Rodriguez is nicely energetic in the lead. JS

A Royal Night Out

★★★ 12

Available from 5 May

A future queen has her first and last hedonistic hurrah in this fanciful concoction from Becoming Jane director Julian Jarrold. Set in 1945, it follows the two British princesses, sensible Elizabeth (Canadian Sarah Gadon) and giddy, pinwheeling Margaret (Bel Powley, above in purple; see also right), as they take to the streets of London to celebrate VE Day. Based on a kernel of truth, the idea feels stretched, but the film is grounded by heartfelt performances including by Rupert Everett and Emily Watson. EMMA SIMMONDS

PERIOD DRAMA

A Small Light

Eps 3 and 4 available from Tuesday

The superb historical drama continues, with Amsterdam's good-hearted Jan and Miep (Joe Cole and Bel Powley) now dedicated to protecting Jews, including Anne Frank, from the ruthless Nazi occupiers. The balancing of family and relationship drama – there are even notes of warm comedy – with the abject horror of the underlying narrative is faultlessly maintained, as the lead couple reckon with their own pasts and futures as well as the immediate task of keeping their wards alive. Both give tough, tender performances worthy of the real heroes they play. JS

AppleTV+

City on Fire

Eps 1–3 available from Friday

The much-hyped 2015 novel this crime drama is based on was steeped in 1970s New York. But here the mystery is transplanted to 2003 and injected with post-9/11 angst. The central conceit, though, remains the same, as we chart the fallout from the shooting of an NYU student in Central Park on those in her orbit. They're a disparate bunch of anarchists, edgy musicians and wealthy high rollers whose secrets are revealed against a backdrop of mysterious city-wide arson attacks. The three episodes landing this week should be enough to ignite your interest. DAVID BROWN

ACTION COMEDY

Ghosted ★★★ 15

In this action-packed comedy, lovelorn Cole Turner (Chris Evans) thinks he's found the woman of his dreams when he meets Sadie Rhodes (Ana de Armas). However, after a sizzling first date, she doesn't answer any of his messages. He decides to make a big romantic gesture by flying to London to surprise her – only to learn there that she's a super-spy trying to take down a weapons dealer (Adrien Brody). Rocketman director Dexter Fletcher steers the action with a practised hand, and the chemistry between Evans and de Armas is electrifying. JAYNE NELSON

CLASSIC DRAMA Great Expectations

All 6 episodes available now

Deviations from the novel in Steven Knight's adaptation seemed to irritate many RT readers. And understandably so. For while the Peaky Blinders writer initially captures the essence of Dickens's poor-boy-makes-good classic, he grows determined to veer away from the original plot. Opium highs? Spankings? Shootouts? The result can, at times, be jarring. But with all six episodes now up on iPlayer, you can judge for yourself. And, thanks to the availability of the BBC's 2011 version, you can compare and contrast. DAVID BROWN

POLICE DRAMA Blue Lights

All 6 episodes available now

In what must have been the easiest commissioning decision of the year, the BBC has ordered a second series of this bracing Belfast-set procedural. And no wonder, as this first run is an admirably unvarnished take on life in the police force. It also feels, thanks to its febrile location, as though the daily patrols of officers can go horribly awry in an instant – a factor that keeps viewers on their toes during the tense interactions between those in uniform (Richard Dormer and Sian Brooke, above centre, being two notable standouts) and the career criminals in their sights. DB

DOCUMENTARY Stacey Dooley: Ready for War?

Available now

It would have been easy to miss this affecting one-off documentary last month. It felt slightly tucked away on BBC3, but deserves a wider audience. After leaving behind their lives in Ukraine, ordinary men are being trained in the UK for something extraordinary. Stacey Dooley speaks to trainee soldiers undertaking an intensive British Army course that aims to impart skills to kill, and not be killed, in the fight against Russia. Faced with the prospect of dying to defend their country, they are stoic yet driven. FRANCES TAYLOR

"We've just finished The Hunt for Raoul Moat," says *Sh**ged Married Annoyed* podcaster Rosie Ramsey (see p36). "I enjoyed it, but we find it really hard to watch people with Geordie accents on TV. They speak posh Geordie so everyone else can understand! And you almost get detached from the story because you're trying to spot which street it's being filmed on." Her comedian husband Chris adds, "We're also loving a bit of Succession. We're behind at the moment – but it's so good!" The Hunt for Raoul Moat is on ITVX; Succession is on Sky Go/Now

Channel 4 (formerly All 4)

COMEDY

The Windsors Coronation Special

Available now

This right regal slice of satire is an excellent antidote to the rest of the week's royal coverage. Scandalous headlines are riffed on, including Harry and Meghan's dealings with Netflix and the expense of a coronation. There are ways to cut costs, though, especially when no-frills Princess Anne (Vicki Pepperdine) is put in charge, and Brian May won't cost a penny to perform as he's been living on the Palace roof "since the Jubilee – with a nest of squirrels". It's all superbly silly. FT

CRIME DRAMA

Walter Presents: Love and Trouble in Paris

All 6 episodes available now

Evidently the French aren't too fussed about Paris becoming a romcom cliché, because here they are with their own wilfully silly but witty series about Julie (Maude Baecker), single at 36 and looking for love in the city. The chance discovery of a love letter puts Julie on her quest: become the woman described in the note, and bag her perfect man. Naturally she has two acerbic, truth-telling best friends in tow, and she's not averse to breaking into song, either. Très drôle! JACK SEALE

Escape Room: Tournament of Champions ★★★ 15

Available now

■ This entertaining sequel to the 2019 "locked-room" horror offers more elaborate traps and a fiendish cliffhanger payoff. Two survivors from the first film (Taylor Russell and Logan Miller) are again in a maze of escape rooms, made by mystery organisation Minos, with four other psychologically damaged participants. Hazards this time include deadly lasers, acid rain and quicksand, with the characters' squabbling reaching fever pitch amid the ludicrous twists and turns.

■ Astronaut Brad Pitt is sent to investigate destructive power surges from the edges of the solar system in this thought-provoking sci-fi drama. Director James Gray references everything from Field of Dreams to Apocalypse Now, with philosophical questions punctuating the action. Pitt's charisma carries the human element, assisted by dazzling visuals. It crams in a bit too much (like the mystery of Pitt's lost father, played by Tommy Lee Jones), but the film reaches further for the stars than most.

The Fab Five return after an 18-month hiatus, ready to dispense deeply inspirational lifestyle tips to ordinary "heroes" who deserve a break, a shot of affirmation and some form of makeover. The presenters' expertise in food, fashion, culture, design and grooming seems to work best in the Southern states – having changed lives in Austin, Texas last time, the gang now hit New Orleans, where bold and colourful self-expression are not in short supply. It is, however, a city that has been through deep trauma, so there are plenty of residents who could use a pep talk. JACK SEALE

In its latest true-crime documentary, Sky investigates the Essex Murders, one of the biggest criminal cases to hit the UK in the 90s. The case focuses on the killings of criminals Patrick Tate, Tony Tucker and Craig Rolfe, known as the Essex Boys, who were found dead in their Range Rover in Rettendon, Essex in December 1995. Two men were convicted of the triple killings, though questions surrounding the case have never really gone away. Now, this gripping three-part documentary explores whether justice was really served 25 years ago.

With hints of Carrie, this Spanish slasher from Carlota Pereda centres on bullied butcher's assistant and plus-size teenager Sara (a captivating Laura Galán). After a vile bout of mockery, her mean-girl tormentors are kidnapped. While Sara witnesses the event, she stays quiet because she sees the abductor as her guardian angel. Pereda pulls no punches with the stark humour and graphic violence, and Sara's awkward dance with danger makes for fascinating viewing, delivering potent shocks aplenty. ALAN JONES

THRILLER

Dead Shot ★★★

Available from Friday

Colin Morgan and Aml Ameen star in this richly atmospheric, if rather too straightforward, 70s-set IRA thriller. Morgan plays an Irish paramilitary man who is out for revenge after his pregnant wife is gunned down by Ameen's SAS sergeant. Directors Charles and Thomas Guard truly capture the period's grubbiness, and Morgan and Ameen are compelling in their roles. However, Ronan Bennett's script could have more depth, with Felicity Jones (above) given little to do as an IRA contact. JAMES MOTTRAM

ROMANTIC COMEDY

Ticket to Paradise ★★★ 12 Available from 5 May

The pairing of A-listers George Clooney and Julia Roberts brings much-needed sparkle to this by-the-book romcom from Ol Parker, the director of Mamma Mia! Here We Go Again. After learning that their daughter (Kaitlyn Dever) plans to marry following a whirlwind courtship, long-divorced David and Georgia rush to Bali to prevent her from repeating their mistakes. But will the Eden-like location lead to a change of heart for them both? The script lacks bite, but Clooney and Roberts are terrific value, and there's solid support from Billie Lourd as Dever's friend. TERRY STAUNTON

Bloodsport (Idris Elba), Peacemaker (John Cena) and King Shark (voiced by Sylvester Stallone) head the task force, with help from the gleefully homicidal Harley Quinn (Margot Robbie). Writer/director James Gunn packs the film with cool attitude and comedy, and it's joyous fun throughout. TS

The Power

Episode 9 available from Friday

This season-one finale leaves the door open for more, while also bringing a few of the stories to a destructive climax. Back in the centre of the action is senatorial candidate Margot (Toni Collette), whose election campaign boils down to a tense TV debate dominated by the question facing the world: should EOD – women's newfound ability to harness electricity – be controlled or criminalised? Some of the twists are predictable, or just grimly inevitable, but it's still gripping. JACK SEALE

THRILLER

Last Light Available from Friday

Matthew Fox hasn't taken a TV role since Lost, but this so-so environmental thriller isn't near the calibre of the 2004 sci-fi mystery. He's petro-chemist Andy Yeats, whose expertise becomes crucial when something mysterious happens to the world's oil supply. A conspiracy is afoot, there to make a point about our dependence on fossil fuels, but the contrast between that and Andy's family life is the stuff of disaster-movie cliché. Downton Abbey's Joanne Froggatt does a decent job in the thankless role of the wife left behind. JS

SPORT DOCUMENTARY Fever Pitch

All 4 episodes available from Sunday

Series two of an in-depth football documentary – the first is available on iPlayer – picks things up in 2003, when the Premier League once again changed for ever, due to one thing: money. Roman Abramovich buys Chelsea and sets about using his billions to turn them into winners – as recalled here by the likes of Frank Lampard (above) and Claudio Ranieri – and such expectations created a new kind of pressure on players and managers. Episode three delicately tells the story of troubled prodigy Jermaine Pennant. JS

SPY DRAMA Rabbit Hole

Episode 8 available from Monday

FINAL EPISODE You know a conspiracy thriller is good when it ends up a long way from where it started. At first in this slick US show, John Weir (Kiefer Sutherland) was a master of corporate espionage being framed for murder. Now he's chasing down an international scandal that plays on our fears of what cyber crime and data leaks might do to Western politics if power gets into the wrong hands. In the finale, a last effort to save democracy puts Weir and his surviving colleagues in further peril. JS

Nearly 20 years in the making, this enchanting autobiographical feature is inspired by director Patrick Read Johnson's own passion for sci-fi cinema. After seeing 2001: a Space Odyssey, Johnson (John Francis Daley) is inspired to make his own cheap 'n' cheesy sci-fi films, while navigating the pitfalls of adolescence. Taking its title from the date Star Wars was released, this coming-of-age tale is filled with witty references to 60s and 70s sci-fi, and crafted with real love and care. DAVE GOLDER

HORROR THRILLER Knock at the Cabin

★★★★★ TV Available now

M Night Shyamalan's supernatural thriller is faithful to the tone of Paul Tremblay's source novel, even if it contains a few narrative changes. City couple Eric (Jonathan Groff) and Andrew (Ben Aldridge) and their adopted daughter Wen (Kristen Cui) are on holiday in rural New Jersey when their peace is disturbed by Leonard (Dave Bautista) and his three associates, who are on a dark mission. Intimate and intense, this is a solid, emotionally engaging film, and the cast is excellent. MATT GLASBY

YOU'RE ALL INVITED... to the coronation
of King Charles III and Queen Camilla

EVENT The Coronation

From 7.30am BBC1/BBC2, 8.30am ITV1, 6.00am Sky News

The nation had a tentative first glimpse of what King Charles III's reign might look like eight months ago. In those disquieting few days following the death of Queen Elizabeth II, he shook hands, hugged and was kissed by members of the public – no doubt breaking every protocol in the book. Chants of "God save the King!" echoed as he greeted crowds keen to embrace their new monarch.

So will the sovereignty of King Charles III and Queen Camilla be one that is more approachable and modern? Reported sources have cited his eagerness for today's ceremony to reflect multiple faiths. And there's the oft-mentioned phrase "slimmed down" – two words that have been used in relation to the procession route, coronation service and even the family itself. Is it enough to help favourably reflect the royals in these more constrained times?

Somewhat ironically, today's coverage is anything but slim. BBC1 will follow the day's events from 7.30am to 3pm, with highlights airing at 7pm. Kirsty Young – who pitched the tone just right during coverage of both the Queen's Platinum Jubilee and funeral – will be in a studio at Buckingham Palace, while Huw Edwards commentates and Sophie Raworth speaks to guests. BBC2 has simultaneous coverage, with signing; audio description is on the red button.

Julie Etchingham and Tom Bradby anchor on ITV1 from 8.30am, and Sky News ambitiously proffers all-day coverage from 6am to 10pm. It perhaps seems excessive. But then, a coronation isn't an event that's taken place in the living memory of most.

Grey's Anatomy on a budget is the vibe I'm currently getting from Casualty. You've got the newbies all hanging out together and jostling for attention. And tonight there's even a bizarre emergency for them to deal with that wouldn't look out of place on the wards of Seattle Grace Hospital.

I'm talking here of an injured mudlark who's admitted to the ED, only for it then to be revealed that he has various unexploded grenades secreted about his person. Now, as I say, any pyrotechnics can't hope to match what we see on Grey's, but this episode does a decent job of ratcheting up the tension, particularly when the bomb squad is called out to assist. DAVID BROWN

Eurovision feels like a much bigger deal this year, now that it's back on home turf – even though home advantage barely counts, like it does in football.

We haven't yet been given a proper rundown of the featured artists on this clips show, but memorable BBC moments that spring to mind include Echo and the Bunnymen doing Seven Seas dressed as penguins and fish in 1984. And who could forget the gravity-defying cosmic quiff sported by Mike Score of A Flock of Seagulls in 1982's performance on Top of the Pops – and what a tune to boot. The question is: will a certain mop-topped quartet make the cut? GARY ROSE

MUSIC Abba at the BBC/The Joy of Abba

How fitting that on coronation day, pop royalty should be honoured, too. And it's not just Dancing Queen on parade. Abba at the BBC (11pm) is a stack-heeled smorgasbord of expertly tooled hits – from Waterloo via Voulez-Vous to I Have a Dream – as well as their most outré outfits.

The Joy of Abba (12 midnight), also from 2013, tells their story with some cute clips. Agnetha's former band sings Up, Up and Away in Swedish, Benny helps a kid pick out Fernando on the piano, and so on. We're now well past the period when people were sniffy about Abba. As one fan says, "What's not cool about a perfect arrangement?" MARK BRAXTON

FILM OF THE DAY

Pride & Prejudice ★★★★★

4.20pm BBC2
Director Joe Wright gave Jane Austen's peerless marriage-go-round a lively spin – and struck gold at the Baftas in his first feature – with Keira Knightley (above) as feisty Elizabeth Bennet and Matthew Macfadyen as surly Mr Darcy. (2005)

DRAMA Magpie Murders

9.15pm BBC1 Full series on iPlayer now

FINAL EPISODE

Most whodunnit fans can remember the first time they were wowed by the solution to a murder mystery. And many will also admit to having tried to chase the memory of that thrill ever since.

For me, it was the big reveal about what exactly happened during the shooting in the saloon bar in Death on the Nile. Nothing has ever come close to that for cleverness... until Magpie Murders, which climaxes here with an audacious double resolution that's both super-smart and playful.

Aficionados of crime fiction are notoriously difficult to please, but I can't imagine anyone coming away from this final episode feeling disappointed. And hopefully we won't have to wait too long for the sequel, Moonflower Murders, in which Lesley Manville is set to return as Susan Ryeland, once again helped by Tim McMullan's Atticus Pünd. DB

Pride & Prejudice

4.20-6.20pm BBC2

PERIOD DRAMA Joe Wright made his directorial debut with this intelligent interpretation of Jane Austen's classic novel. The film presents its Regency heroine Elizabeth Bennet (Keira Knightley) as a waspish tomboy, able to tie sullen bachelor Mr Darcy (Succession's Matthew Macfadyen) in knots with her spirited ripostes. Knightley is on good form, and there's strong support from Brenda Blethyn and Donald Sutherland as her marriage-obsessed mother and doting father. The film also marked the first screen role for Carey Mulligan as Lizzie's sister Kitty. SLOAN FREER (US/UK/Fr 2005, HD)

Sing

12.45-3.00pm C5

MUSICAL A koala stages a singing contest to save his theatre in this joyous animated movie. Among the entrants are a much-hassled hausfrau pig, a shy elephant with a big voice, a teenage gorilla from a bad home and an egomaniac mouse with a Sinatra complex. Writer/director Garth Jennings puts plenty of heart into the animal antics. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2016, HD)

Matilda

3.00-4.50pm ITV1

FANTASY Director Danny DeVito revels in the black comedy of this typically dark Roald Dahl story. Mara Wilson is excellent as the gifted girl who is packed off to Crunchem Hall school. DeVito – who co-stars as Matilda's boorish dad – cleverly shoots much of the film from a child's-eye view, while Pam Ferris is terrifying as Miss Trunchbull. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1996, HD)

Tangled

3.15-4.45pm BBC1

ADVENTURE Disney's deft version of a Brothers Grimm fairy tale sees Rapunzel (voiced by Mandy Moore) kidnapped from her royal parents as a baby and trapped in a tower by Mother Gothel. Cocksure thief Flynn Rider (Zachary Levi) provides the princess with a possible escape route. Their ensuing adventures are great fun, in what is a smart and snappy tale. ALAN JONES (US 2010, HD)

Star Trek: Generations

3.40-6.10pm Film4

SCI-FI Continuing Film4's Star Trek season, this exciting adventure unites the cast of the original TV series (led by William Shatner) with the Next Generation crew (commanded by Patrick Stewart) as they try to stop Malcolm McDowell's scientist from tapping into a dangerous energy source. Star Trek Beyond is showing tonight on C4, while First Contact is on Film4 tomorrow. AJ (US 1994, edited for content, HD)

The Dam Busters

5.25-7.40pm C5

WAR This thrilling drama about the bouncing-bomb raid on the dams of the Ruhr valley stands among the best British movies about the Second World War. Michael Redgrave puts a pinch too much bumbling boffin into his portrayal of Barnes Wallis, but Richard Todd was never better as Wing Commander Guy Gibson, who led the mission. DP (UK 1954, BW, HD)

Edward Scissorhands

6.50-8.30pm BBC2

FANTASY Tim Burton's bewitching fairy tale packs an unforgettable emotional wallop. Johnny Depp gives a sensitive performance as the "Punkenstein" creation of scientist Vincent Price. Edward's inability to touch the things he loves because of his razor and scissor appendages makes for potent symbolism of the highest mythic order. AJ (US 1990, HD)

Homeward

9.00-10.30pm BBC4

DRAMA This anguished road movie centres on the relationship between a grieving Ukrainian father and his estranged student son. Arriving in Kyiv to collect the body of his eldest boy, who has died fighting in the Donbass, Mustafa (Akhtem Seitablayev) insists that Alim (Remzi Bilyalov) help escort his brother's casket back to the Crimea for burial. The bonding journey that follows leaves a lasting impression. DP (Ukr 2019, violence, swearing, HD)

Road to Perdition

10.55pm-1.05am ITV1

CRIME Tom Hanks plays against type here as a feared hitman working for Irish-American Mob boss Paul Newman, who regards him as a son. Professional and familial loyalties become blurred when Hanks's own family is targeted. Sam Mendes's evocative gangster movie will utterly transport you back to moody 1930s Chicago. JASON CARO (US 2002, violence, swearing, HD)

The Coronation Concert 8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

LIVE

If yesterday was full of formality and pageantry, this evening sees a collective loosening of ties as the equivalent of a post-ceremony wedding disco gets underway. Not that it's been entirely smooth sailing: much has been made in the press over the past few months about who won't be at this live concert to celebrate the coronation, with several big names from the world of music reportedly turning down an invite to perform. And then there's the hoo-ha over the ballot. Confusion over allocation meant many were left disappointed after believing they had secured tickets, only to find out this wasn't the case...

But as the event itself gets underway, no doubt that will all dissipate as 20,000 people descend on Windsor Castle's lawn to see legend Lionel Richie, popstar Katy Perry, opera star Andrea Bocelli and boyband-turned-manband Take That. And hotfooting it from fronting yesterday's coverage is Kirsty Young. She's host for the night, while Clara Amfo and Jordan Banjo will be interviewing the acts backstage. FRANCES TAYLOR RT Coronation Special: page 7; Kirsty Young: page 16

FOOD

Coronation Kitchen Live

10.30am BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Many programmes have had "Coronation" added to their titles this week to give extra lustre (though I see Corrie has wisely decided not to call itself Coronation Coronation Street). First to get patriotic are the Saturday Kitchen team, who have switched days to whet our appetites for the Big Lunch. Chef Adam Byatt offers food he cooked for the King and Queen when they ate at his restaurant in 2021.

From there, it's on to Hampton Court Palace with Songs of Praise (12 noon BBC1), where Katherine Jenkins and Pam Rhodes speak to faith leaders about the King's passions, before scope broadens with Coronation: the UK Celebrates - Live (12.30pm BBC1). DAVID BROWN RT Coronation Special: page 7

DRAMA

Sense and Sensibility

12.50pm, 2.00pm, 3.10pm Drama
Catch up via UKTV Play

Those wanting some respite from the coronation may welcome this repeat of Andrew Davies's three-part adaptation of the Jane Austen classic. A wonderful story layered with class resentments and impecunious women in a patriarchal society, it has a top-drawer cast that includes David Morrissey, Dominic Cooper, Dan Stevens and Janet McTeer. Charity Wakefield and Hattie Morahan play Marianne and Elinor Dashwood respectively, the two sisters who go on a voyage of burgeoning sexual and romantic discovery. Although staying faithful to the spirit of the book, Davies – as always – can't help sexing it up a little, and even adds a Pride and Prejudice-style wet-shirt scene. JANE RACKHAM

Countryfile

6.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

So miserably toxic has the debate surrounding refugees become that it now feels almost daring for a TV show to be highlighting the positive contributions being made by those who have arrived on these shores. But Countryfile is sticking its head above the parapet to highlight the warm welcome given in a rural Hampshire community to a mother and daughter working on farmland after fleeing Ukraine.

Matt Baker and Margherita Taylor first met the pair ten months ago, but in this catch-up edition we discover how their lives have altered, while a new report looks at the changes in seasonal recruitment since the war cut off much of this vital workforce. DB

FACTUAL

Antiques Roadshow

7.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

Over the years the show has seen a treasure trove of artefacts with links to the royal family: from precious items to quirky objects as well as coronation souvenirs galore. We're reminded here of many of them, including the royal bracelet that was found in the street and, from 1988, a young collector's horde of commemorative china mugs.

Queen Victoria is the monarch who's generated the most hilarity on the Roadshow, with items such as a pair of her open drawers (knickers to you and me) and her toilet seat. However, host Fiona Bruce also sees several editions of Radio Times marking previous coronations. So it might be an idea to keep this week's issue... JR

COMEDY

Morecambe and Wise: 30 Funniest Moments8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

Is there anyone who hasn't seen "All the right notes", Glenda Jackson carrying on as Cleo or Angela Rippon revealing unknown hoofing skills? All of those feature in this Eric and Ern clipathon. Fortunately, (a) they're funny even after the 20th time and (b) there's always something else to appreciate. For instance, André Previn's beautifully horrified expression at Morecambe's mangling of Grieg's Piano Concerto. Or the ever performance-perfect Peter Cushing trying not to laugh after having to say the line "Tell me about your doings?"

Anita Harris, Nina Wadia and Rick Wakeman are among those recalling days of instant sunshine.

MUSIC

Spring Soul and Jazz from Cheltenham8.15pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Marcus Brigstocke hosts this celebration of music from the late 1950s, featuring more than 80 musicians and drawing inspiration from the likes of Count Basie, Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington and Aretha Franklin. Among those joining Guy Barker's Big Band and the BBC Concert Orchestra in the Big Top at Cheltenham is Mica Paris, Vanessa Haynes, Kurt Elling, Madeline Bell and Strictly Come Dancing's Tommy Blaize. The concert had not been recorded as RT went to press, but it promises to be an extraordinary night of soul and jazz music. It's also the perfect way to recover if you've slightly overdone it with your Coronation Big Lunch... JR

TRAVEL

Simon Reeve's South America9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

What's so impressive about Reeve, apart from his respect for and empathy with people, is his ability to switch seamlessly through different subjects. He can easily go from talking about a country's wildlife to revealing its economic troubles and history and then chat to a rebel leader turned gold-mining politician. Because he's not judgemental in his interviews, everyone is incredibly open. It makes great TV.

In this series from 2022, he travels 4,000 miles across South America, "a continent of dramatic extremes". On this leg he meets refugees, conservationists and French Foreign Legion soldiers – and is equally comfortable with all of them. JR

FILM OF THE DAY

Carmen Jones ★★★★★2.40pm (12.25pm N Ireland) BBC2

Arguably the finest film showcase of the late, great Harry Belafonte is a bright, Technicolor musical marvel that sees the star's Corporal Joe tasked with escorting Dorothy Dandridge's spirited Carmen to the police – which is harder than it sounds... (1954)

(Niamh Algar)

DRAMA

Malpractice9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

It's in the scenes with Norma and George that this series feels like a medical Line of Duty. OK, so they may work for the MIU (Malpractice Investigation Unit), but there's an air of AC-12 about them. Their aim, though, is not to root out bent coppers but dodgy doctors and, in episode three, they see connections between the hospital fatalities and the Guelder clinic, which specialises in addiction issues.

It's a business that's also on the radar of Lucinda, though she's initially more preoccupied tonight with the inquest into Edith's death. Not a surprise, really, seeing as the dead woman's father Sir Anthony Owusu is one of those interrogating witnesses. Despite working well in a dramatic sense, it's a plot point that left me wondering whether someone so emotionally connected to the case would really be up there asking questions. DB

Carmen Jones ★★★★★ 2.40-4.25pm BBC2 (starts 12.25pm in N Ireland)

MUSICAL Harry Belafonte, who died in April, aged 96, was on the cusp of international stardom when he was cast in this adaptation of Oscar Hammerstein's Broadway hit. Though his and co-star Dorothy Dandridge's singing was dubbed – their voices deemed unsuitable for music lifted from a Bizet opera – the film provided an eye-catching showcase for their talents. Shortly after, Belafonte became a sensation with Calypto, the first million-selling album in the UK. As well as performing, Belafonte would become an outspoken Civil Rights activist for the remainder of his life. CALUM BAKER (US 1954, HD)

Two Mules for Sister Sara ★★★★★ 1.25-3.40pm CS 15

WESTERN Clint Eastwood plays a quizzical cowboy in this enjoyable Don Siegel caper, saving nun Shirley MacLaine from a fate worse than death in the desert. The leads are perfectly paired, and Siegel keeps the pace up – although some may find the final, gory battle scene a bit strong. SUE HEAL (US/Mex 1970, violence, edited for some of its language, HD)

The Jungle Book ★★★★★ 2.05-3.45pm BBC1 PG

ADVENTURE Disney's epic live-action adaptation of Rudyard Kipling's novel follows orphaned "man cub" Mowgli (Neel Sethi), whose life in the jungle is thrown into jeopardy by the arrival of tiger Shere Khan (voiced by Idris Elba). The magic comes from the CGI action rather than the musical numbers, while the animals are brilliantly realised. VICTORIA LUXFORD (US 2016, HD)

From Russia with Love ★★★★★ 4.10-6.25pm ITV1 PG

SPY In one of the most popular James Bond movies, Sean Connery's 007 is duped into smuggling a decoding machine – along with a Soviet clerk (Daniela Bianchi) – from Turkey to the West via the Orient Express. Lotte Lenya is unforgettable as villain Rosa Klebb, and the film revels in its marvellous atmosphere of foreign intrigue. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1963, may be edited for content, HD)

Star Trek: First Contact ★★★★★ 4.45-6.55pm Film4 12

SCI-FI In this first-rate outing featuring the Next Generation cast, the Borg travels back in time to sabotage that pivotal moment when we first made contact with an alien race. What else can Captain Picard (Patrick Stewart) do except follow and sort things out? Star Trek: Insurrection follows, and Film4's Trek season concludes tomorrow with Nemesis. ALAN JONES (US 1996, edited for content, HD)

Mrs Doubtfire ★★★★★ 5.40-8.00pm C4 12

COMEDY Robin Williams gives one of the performances of his career here, playing an actor who disguises himself as a Scottish nanny in order to be close to his children after he splits from his wife (Sally Field). Director Chris Columbus reins in Williams's exuberance while retaining enough of his personality to ensure that every gag hits the spot. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1993, edited for language, HD)

The Equalizer ★★★★★ 9.00-11.35pm C4 15

THRILLER In this slick reboot of the 1980s TV show, Denzel Washington takes the role of Robert McCall, guardian angel to those in trouble. McCall is resourceful and damn-near indestructible as he uses his "particular set of skills" to confound Russian gangsters. It's a bit ludicrous, but Washington's natural charisma keeps total disbelief at bay. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

The Shawshank Redemption ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.15am BBC2 (not in N Ireland) 15

DRAMA This deeply moving version of a Stephen King story from first-time director Frank Darabont is one of the best adaptations of the novelist's work. Tim Robbins plays a banker sent to prison for murder, who befriends fellow lifer Morgan Freeman. Under Darabont's inspired direction, both leads rise to the challenge of portraying dignity against the odds. AJ (US 1994, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

The Turning ★★★★★ 12.20-1.50am BBC1 (starts 1.20am in Scotland) 15

HORROR A governess at an English country house battles dark forces in this update of Henry James's The Turn of the Screw. Mackenzie Davis is the ex-teacher left in charge of two youngsters (Brooklyn Prince and Finn Wolfhard) in their remote home. The film has some hair-raising moments and a suitably eerie setting. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

MUSIC

Eurovision Welcomes the World

6.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Anyone who isn't a fan of Eurovision may wish to turn their sofas to the wall for the next week, as the BBC is throwing what must surely be a decade's light entertainment budget at this year's contest.

Kicking off the festivities tonight, Rylan and actor Sunetra Sarker present highlights of yesterday's launch event, hosted by AJ Odudu and Joel Dommett. Look out for an eclectic guest list of local luminaries, from Ricky Tomlinson to Shirley Ballas, plus Frankie Goes to Hollywood reuniting 36 years after they originally split up. Odudu told RT she still marvels at the enthusiasm around the semi-final allocation draw in January: "I never thought there would be so much excitement around me and Rylan picking out country names from giant clay balls."

At 9pm, Jason Manford and Chelcee Grimes explore what gives the contest its enduring pulling power in Eurovision Calling: Jason and Chelcee's Ultimate Guide, an hour of calm reflection before the jamboree kicks off proper with the rest of the week's programming (see right). CAROLINE FROST

TRAVEL

Clive Myrie's Italian Road Trip

6.30pm BBC2

Full series available now on iPlayer

Naples: the unofficial capital of southern Italy and the birthplace of pizza, but often avoided by tourists due to its reputation for poverty and crime. Clive Myrie's having none of that, throwing himself enthusiastically into his visit and, refreshingly, asking sensible questions and making descriptive comments (not simply gasping, "Oh, look at that!").

He makes (and, naturally, eats) pizza, explores a hotel-cum-art gallery and learns about the city's famous figurines. Best of all, he asks to have a photo taken of him wearing a scary costume backstage at the San Carlo Opera House to send to his wife. How adorable is that? Continues nightly. JANE RACKHAM

Sarah Beeny's New Life in the Country

8.00pm C4 Full series available

now via C4 streaming

Sarah Beeny and her husband Graham's main project this week is to erect a clock tower, complete with a weathervane and bell, on top of their Somerset house's wooden car port to give it a bit of quirky charm. There are valiant attempts to decorate it with their sons Billy, Charlie, Raffey and Laurie's initials made from lead and a Somerset dragon but, despite Sarah's insistence that her method of hoisting the parts onto the roof will work, there are issues.

Perhaps not surprisingly, her attempt to cheer everyone up with home-made crisps made from nettles doesn't go down too well either. "Will you please stop making things from nettles?" the boys plead. JR

QUIZ

University Challenge

8.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The phoney war of the quarter-finals, where teams can afford to lose one match and still progress, is almost over. Southampton and Newnham College have both suffered defeats at this stage so absolutely must win tonight to reach the semi-finals.

At one level, this is an edition that looks as old as the programme itself, with terrifyingly tough questions on science, history and classical music all present and correct, accompanied by increasingly frequent grumpy barks of "Come on!" from Jeremy Paxman. On another, though, it feels brilliantly modern, with Newnham College's excellent side comprising an all-female team. And although this shouldn't be of note in 2023, it still very much is. CERI THOMAS

NATURE*David Attenborough's Zoo Quest in Colour8.30pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Any chance to celebrate the career of Sir David Attenborough shouldn't be ignored and today, on the occasion of his 97th birthday, the BBC is offering up some gifts from the archive. One of these treats, Zoo Quest, takes us back to the 1950s and some of his earliest on-screen adventures, now spruced up in colour and high definition. Elsewhere, there's a more recent offering with 2018's Blue Planet II: Oceans of Wonder on BBC2 at 7pm, while the profile A Life on Air (10pm BBC4) is an affectionate overview from 2002 presented by someone who has flung himself almost as far as the great naturalist himself: Python-turned-globetrotter Michael Palin. DAVID BROWN

DOCUMENTARY*Andrew: the Problem Prince9.00pm C4 Full series available now via C4 streaming

Nobody was forcibly shoving Prince Andrew in front of those BBC cameras back in 2019. In fact, his friend and media lawyer Paul Tweed advised Andrew not to do the interview. But his words were ignored, and instead we were treated to strange tales of not being able to sweat and a visit to Pizza Express.

So why did the prince choose this course of action? Anger? Hubris? Stupidity? In the concluding part of this downfall documentary, we hear again from Emily Maitlis, who talks of her astonishment at the Queen's decision to approve the interview, and the fallout for the monarchy at large is analysed. DB

DOCUMENTARY*Sam Thompson: Is This ADHD? 9.00pm E4

Catch up via C4 streaming

Made in Chelsea's Sam Thompson's energetic, fun-loving personality has helped him become a successful presenter and reality TV star. Yet over the years, friends and family have suggested to him that he could have attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), and he now wants to find out for sure.

Some of his symptoms (an inability to concentrate, feeling continually stressed etc) are common among people struggling with modern-day life. But he also displays other traits unique to ADHD, and an assessment by a psychologist proves illuminating. Celebrity documentaries are ten a penny nowadays, but this one is a cut above most. KAY RIBEIRO

THE HEAT IS ON
Will Cristina make it through to knockout week?

FOOD*MasterChef8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

"I've left my potatoes in the hotel." There's a sentence you don't hear very often, but Cristina, one of the nine cooks in the fifth and final week of heats, doesn't panic about her lack of spuds for her family's favourite dish. She simply borrows a couple from another competitor, and even calmly offers to take John Torode and Gregg Wallace's plates after they have finished tasting her food and wash them up for them.

Most of the other cooks are more nervous than her, though the one who serves something Torode pronounces "a bundle of brilliance, really delicious" obviously needn't have worried. Later a risotto prompts the judges to comment that they have never tasted this unusual flavour combination before. "Yeah, me neither!" says the cook, making them crack up.

There's more from the amateur cooks on Wednesday and Friday. JR

9.00 1917 ★★★★★

First World War drama starring George MacKay and Dean-Charles Chapman. Two young British corporals are tasked with delivering an urgent warning about an enemy ambush to a battalion further along the Western Front. The quickest way to do this is to go over the top, through the abandoned German trenches and across the French countryside – but they soon run into peril and face an increasingly fraught race against time... Available on iPlayer for 30 days. Film of the Day: page 81.

10.50 John Lennon: a Life in Ten Pictures

The musician's life is explored through a series of memorable images. It's a journey that took him from a difficult childhood in Liverpool to Hamburg, international stardom with the Beatles, peace campaigning with his second wife, avant-garde artist Yoko Ono, and a tragic death outside his home in New York City in December 1980. The significance of the images and the circumstances of their taking are discussed by those who knew Lennon best. Director Tim Niele; Series producer Chris Wilson (R) (S) (HD)

FILM REVIEWS

DAY

15

WAR Two young soldiers (George MacKay, above, and Dean-Charles Chapman) must deliver a life-saving letter to the front line in director Sam Mendes's ambitious, thrilling and harrowing First World War odyssey. The apparent suicide mission takes the pair across a booby-trapped no man's land and into recently occupied German territory, all filmed to give the illusion of being shot in one take by Oscar-winning cinematographer Roger Deakins. There are also terrific cameos from Andrew Scott, Benedict Cumberbatch, Mark Strong and Richard Madden along the way. ALAN JONES (UK/US/Ind 2019, violence, swearing, HD)

The Mitchells vs the Machines ★★★★★

9.45am-12 noon ITV2

U

COMEDY In this anarchic animation, Abbi Jacobson voices teenager Katie, who can't wait to go to university, not least to get away from her overbearing dad. But when he packs the family into the car to take Katie to college, their road trip is thrown off course by a robot uprising. This warm and witty celebration of family is stuffed with outrageously funny set pieces. JOSH WINNING (US 2020, HD)

Goosebumps ★★★

PG

ADVENTURE This spooky comedy takes RL Stine's children's books as its inspiration. Dylan Minnette stars as Zach, a teenager in a new town, who finds himself falling for the girl next door. However, Zach's curiosity about her dad (Jack Black) and his strange manuscripts gets the better of him, leading to all manner of monsters being unleashed. STEPHEN CARTY (US/Aus 2015, HD)

The Ladykillers ★★★★★

2.20-4.10pm TCM

U

BLACK COMEDY A supreme blend of the seedy and the sinister, this Ealing classic sees the plans of a gang of thugs stymied by their dotty encounters his evil clone twin, Shinzon (Tom Hardy). ADAM SMITH (US 2002, edited for content, HD)

Yes Man ★★★★★

12

COMEDY Based loosely on Danny Wallace's non-fiction book, this enjoyably wacky comedy stars Jim Carrey as an antisocial divorcee who turns his life around after deciding to answer every question with a "yes". As funny as Carrey is, Rhys Darby steals every scene he's in as a geeky, Harry Potter-obsessed bank manager. ANDREW COLLINS (US/Aus/UK 2008, edited for content, HD)

Murphy's War ★★★

9.00-11.05pm

Talking Pictures TV

12

WAR The African Queen looms large over this wartime tale, in which Peter O'Toole's manic Irish seaman plans to fix an old plane and sink a German U-boat. He teams up with a missionary (O'Toole's then wife, Sian Phillips) and an oil engineer, convincingly played by Philippe Noiret. The blend of whimsy and battle is skillfully handled by director Peter Yates (Bullitt). ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1971, violence, swearing)

Hellraiser ★★★★★

11.00pm-12.50am Legend

18

HORROR Writer Clive Barker transferred his trademark perverse chills to the screen with this, his directorial debut. A surreal, claustrophobic and graphic shocker about the consequences of opening a Chinese puzzle box, the film allowed Barker to introduce a dark mythology to the genre, as well as the Cenobites – disfigured, leather-clad angels from hell. AJ (UK 1987, violence, swearing, sex scenes)

Turkey: Empire of Erdogan

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

"Victimhood always wins votes," notes one contributor to this authoritative two-part profile of President Recep Tayyip Erdogan, Turkey's dominant political figure for two decades. It is a maxim most authoritarian rulers have turned to their advantage, from Hitler to Trump, and now comprises the backbone of Erdogan's increasingly divisive and dictatorial approach to the exercise of power.

Gabriel Range's documentary corrals a wide range of contributors, from long-time Erdogan allies to foreign experts and outright opponents. It examines his unlikely rise to power from an impoverished childhood as a Muslim outsider in a secular state through to his transformative mayoralty in his home city of Istanbul, along with his canny alliance-building to chip away at the provocations of a military used to elevating and discarding political leaders as it suited them.

Recent events have seen Erdogan adopt similar strategies, invoking the "deep state" (a phrase with its origins in Turkey, apparently), exposing foreign-funded and frequently manufactured coup attempts and, as this opener concludes, turning parents against children to retain power. Part two airs tomorrow. GABRIEL TATE

The Art of the Garden

7.00pm Sky Arts

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

Dutch garden designer Piet Oudolf believes that plants look beautiful even when they're decaying, so he uses perennials instead of annuals. "The Dutch Wave" was a radical concept in the 1980s, so the RHS were shocked when he said that brown was a colour, too.

His detailed designs, drawn on tracing paper and including information about the plants' companionship as well as their structure and colour, are themselves works of art. But we also see them come to life in his first British garden at Scampston Hall in North Yorkshire, an example of rewilding long before the term was conceived... although he merely shrugs that it just came naturally to him. JANE RACKHAM

Eurovision Song Contest: Semi-Final

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

As one of the Big Five countries, the UK already has a place in Saturday's final, along with last year's winners Ukraine – but for the 15 countries performing in tonight's first semi-final at the Liverpool Arena, there's still everything to play for.

It should see particularly fierce competition, with some of 2023's hottest-tipped acts – including Sweden's returning winner Loreen and a bizarre, colourful performance from Finland – rubbing up against plucky underdogs, all hoping to secure one of ten precious spots in the final. Alesha Dixon, Hannah Waddingham and Ukrainian singer Julia Sanina take hosting duties. The second semi is on Thursday.

The Greatest Auction

8pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

This curious new series has constructed its own auction house and sells various items in it, overseen by presenter AJ Odudu. She interviews buyers and sellers to get their back story and chat about how much the lots might be worth. Then we watch the thing being auctioned. That's it.

Up for flogging are a jar full of pickled pig foetuses, a collection of Buzzcocks memorabilia, a fez that once belonged to Tommy Cooper and, for the grand finale, a chunk of concrete bearing artwork attributed to Banksy. There's a First Dates-style effort to make personalities of the auction house staff but as the bids for the Banksy fly in, it's not obvious why we should care. JACK SEALE

The Kidnap of Angel Lynn

9pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

In September 2020, Angel Lynn's controlling ex-boyfriend Chay kidnapped her by bundling her into a van. Nobody knows whether she was pushed or jumped but she fell out of the vehicle when it was travelling at 60mph along the A6. Her devastating brain injuries left her paralysed and almost catatonic.

It means she can't tell her side of the story, so her toxic relationship with the abusive Chay is revealed partly through text messages, recorded conversations and photos, although there is also CCTV footage of him grabbing her off the street. Her mum Nikki wants to highlight the case because she doesn't want anyone else to experience such coercive behaviour. JR

Miss Scarlet and the Duke

Catch up via Sky Go/Now
Eliza Scarlet, the gumshoe with gumption, is on the brink not only of solvency but also making a name for herself in Victorian London. A potentially lucrative case has her hoping she can add it to the plaque outside her office, too. The only dark cloud in her skies is the awkwardness that has crept into her relationship with the Duke. He's now walking out with Arabella (Sophie Robertson), who was the bane of Eliza's childhood days.

An unclaimed inheritance throws the leads together in a tangled tale that tests Eliza in unforeseen ways, and happily gives more work to Evan McCabe as adorably puppy-dog-ish Detective Fitzroy. MARK BRAXTON

SITCOM

Colin from Accounts

10.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer
Ashley (Harriet Dyer) wakes up next to James (Tai Hara) – the handsome doctor from the hospital (and her ex) – in a blissful sun-drenched haze. It's only when he says her face is like a lasagne that it dawns on her that she could well be having a dream...

She's rudely awoken back into her reality, which is still one of unstable living arrangements and unstable relationships. Her room at friend Megan's house suddenly doesn't look too permanent, and a romantic development leaves Gordon (Patrick Brammall) further away than before. There's yet to be an episode that doesn't zing and zip along, but, in this one particularly, some of the peripheral characters teeter close to caricature. FRANCES TAYLOR

Perry Mason

10.05pm Sky Atlantic
Catch up via Sky Go/Now

Matthew Rhys is a lot more active in the role of Perry Mason than burly Raymond Burr ever was. Back in the day, Mason would always send PI Paul Drake off to chase down clues while he paced around that grand office of his. But now, the lawyer and his detective are more of a double act and forever endangering themselves as they build their case.

That case, by the way, involves two Mexican brothers who stand accused of fatally shooting LA businessman Brooks McCutcheon. Mason senses they're innocent, and when he gets that feeling, you just know the district attorney's office ought to pack up their manila folders and head on home. DAVID BROWN

COMMERCIAL BREAKS
Kate Stanners, Carol Reay, Barbara Noakes, Alex Taylor, Nadja Lossgott and Helen Calcraft have led the way in advertising

DOCUMENTARY
Mad Women 10.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming
Do any of the women in this photo look familiar? Probably not, but these are six of the pioneering creatives behind some of this country's most innovative and memorable ad campaigns. Who doesn't remember the Shake n' Vac (I bet you're singing the jingle right now) and Levi's launderette ads? Carol Reay and Barbara Noakes worked on those.
There are loads of nostalgic ads in this documentary, which takes us back to the 70s when these women broke into an industry dominated by men for decades. The workplace, they agree, was just like Mad Men, while ads were sexist, portraying women as only interested in housework or getting a man. They talk – authoritatively, of course – about changing attitudes and trends, the breaking of taboos and the power of advertising which goes far beyond simply selling products. JR

Downton Abbey ★★

PG

DRAMA King George V and Queen Mary visit the Crawleys at Downton in this incident-packed spin-off from the TV series. Although feeling like a whole season of storylines crammed into a dramatic Christmas special, it's safe, sumptuous and unsurprising to a fault. The ensemble, featuring regulars such as Hugh Bonneville and Elizabeth McGovern (pictured), plus new additions Imelda Staunton, Tuppence Middleton and David Haig, plays it to the hilt, with Maggie Smith stealing all her scenes. It's everything you want, with a cocktail olive on top. ALAN JONES (UK/US/Chi 2019, HD)

I Remember Mama

Talking Pictures TV

U

DRAMA Early-20th-century San Francisco is the setting for this story of a family of Norwegian immigrants and their struggles for survival. Irene Dunne is classy and charming as the matriarch who holds everyone together and Barbara Bel Geddes is the daughter who records events in her diary. George Stevens directs with a warm heart and a diverting way with a cliché. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1948, BW)

Serious Charge ★★

3.50-5.50pm

PG

DRAMA This unassuming British movie takes an unexpected turn into risky areas. Anthony Quayle is the former army vicar who arrives in a new town to run a youth club. Sarah Churchill throws herself at him, but Quayle prefers football. Then a local teddy boy accuses him of sexual assault. Look out for Cliff Richard, who gets to sing his hit single Living Doll. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1959, BW)

The Searchers ★★

U

WESTERN John Ford's majestic tale of revenge and reconciliation is his finest western – and he made some of the best. As John Wayne's Ethan Edwards sets out to kill both the Comanche butcher of his brother's family and the abducted niece (Natalie Wood) who, in his eyes, has turned native, his five-year quest becomes a search for his own soul. TH (US 1956, HD)

Under Siege ★★

THRILLER Steven Seagal struck gold with this slick nautical spin on the Die Hard concept. Portraying possibly the unlikely cook in the history of cinema, Seagal is the US Navy's only hope when a crack squad of terrorists, led by Tommy Lee Jones, hijacks his ship. Director Andrew Davis never misses a beat and stages some awesome set pieces. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1992, violence, nudity, HD)

Starsky &amp; Hutch ★★

9.00-11.00pm

Comedy Central

COMEDY By respecting his source material and skewering some much-loved clichés, co-writer/director Todd Phillips nails this big-screen version of the TV show about two mismatched cops. Ben Stiller plays by-the-book Starsky and Owen Wilson is laid-back Hutch, who learn to rely on each other while bringing a drugs lord (Vince Vaughn) to justice. AJ (US 2004, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

The Guest ★★

10.55pm-1.00am Great Movies

THRILLER Downton's Dan Stevens ditched his costume-drama image with this tense movie, which casts him as a charismatic antihero. He plays a discharged soldier who turns up at the home of an army friend who was killed in action. The family takes him in, but then the seemingly humble farm boy reveals his sinister side. DAMON WISE (US/UK 2014, violence, swearing, nudity, drug abuse)

Black Book ★★

11.05pm-2.00am Film4

15

WAR Having made his name in Hollywood with the likes of RoboCop and Basic Instinct, Paul Verhoeven returned to his native Holland for this tale of the Dutch Resistance. Carice van Houten stars as a Jewish singer who infiltrates Nazi headquarters via the bed of an officer (Sebastian Koch). It's a rollicking wartime yarn with good performances and well-handled action scenes. ADAM SMITH (UK/Neth/Bel/Ger 2006, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

Moonstruck ★★

PG

ROMCOM This movie proved once and for all that Cher could act. She gives an Oscar-winning performance as a widow who looks set to marry Danny Aiello, but falls for his moody younger brother Nicolas Cage instead. Director Norman Jewison adds enough quirky touches to keep the formula fresh, and the cast makes the most of John Patrick Shanley's fine screenplay. JF (US 1987, swearing)

REALITY

Race across the World 9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

SERIES FINALE

Some viewers have argued that this series, where the pairs have raced across Canada, hasn't been as exciting to watch as previous years when they've travelled through Europe and Asia or South America. Others have complained about how many taxis the competitors have taken. However, I think it's been just as addictive.

It's been fascinating to see how their relationships have been affected – and strengthened – by this gruelling experience. Certainly, both father-and-daughter teams (Ladi and Monique, above left, and Kevin and Claudia, centre) have come to understand each other a lot better as they battled with physical and emotional challenges as well as the occasional "princess" stop. There have been some genuinely touching moments, too, when a random act of kindness has brought a tear to the eye.

As the remaining teams set off on the last leg of the race, any of them could win it – and I, for one, don't mind in the least who does.

It's followed later (check listings for times) by a behind-the-scenes doc that reunites the racers, giving them the chance to talk about their highs and lows, and revealing their first impressions of each other. JANE RACKHAM

Designing the Hebrides

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Banjo Beale tackles a tricky makeover this week: the Isle of Mull's rugby clubhouse. He is very hesitant about working on its drab, magnolia interior because he simply doesn't understand sport. The key thing about it, he's told, is to ensure the beer gets over the bar as quickly as possible. For the first time in this series, he really struggles to come up with ideas and his usually jolly team aren't keen on the ones he suggests.

Then, as the project gets going, the interior designer reveals – very movingly – that he was badly teased when he was forced to play sport as a child in Australia and that he suffered homophobia before even he knew he was gay.

Eventually, of course – rugby pun alert – he kicks the job into touch. JR

Edinburgh's property market is a game of speed, with places getting snapped up within days and buyers making offers without even viewing. Phil Spencer lends a guiding hand to newlyweds Freya and Elliot, who are desperate to leave their Aberdeen rental for the capital city's cultural buzz. Meanwhile, Kirstie Allsopp helps dating app success story Sadia and Sohail. Having lived in Dublin, they thought it would be easier to buy in Edinburgh – an idea greeted by Kirstie with a hollow laugh.

Our experts encourage both couples to compromise, but in a competitive market, can they table a winning bid? And can Kirstie get over her hatred of washing machines in kitchens? MICHAEL HOGAN

Wales's Home of the Year

8.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Prepare for a couple of genuinely breathtaking properties as we head to the south west of Wales for the last of the regional heats. The judges dish out some of their highest scores of the series as they visit an Edwardian townhouse in the Mumbles with incredible views out across Swansea Bay, a beautiful converted watermill near Ammanford, and a cottage nestled under the castle in Kidwelly.

One house boasts a room that sends all three judges into raptures, but will that be enough to put it through to next week's grand final?

Judge Owain Wyn Evans's natty pink three-piece suit isn't the only thing clashing as he, Mandy Watkins and Glen Thomas try to decide on a winner. CERI THOMAS

Turkey: Empire of Erdogan

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Could the empire be about to fall? This is the question hanging over the concluding part of Gabriel Range's excellent two-part documentary, as the incumbent president faces a tanking economy, resurgent opposition and the aftershocks of an earthquake for which his government proved woefully underprepared.

Yet, as another expert line-up acknowledges, you write off at your peril a man who has brazened out corruption charges, faced down separatists and coups and continued to find political allies. Given his country's pivotal role as a bridge between East and West, the EU, Russia and the world will be watching the results of this year's election with no little trepidation. GABRIEL TATE

Catch up via C4 streaming
With the number of young people in care shockingly set to reach a record 100,000 in the next decade, this three-part series is an important watch. It follows six remarkable teenagers and their families for a crucial year in their lives as they prepare to leave the care system.

Tonight we meet 17-year-old Xorin, who was sent to a children's home in Wales after being exploited by a drugs gang and is now returning to Coventry to rebuild his life with his mum. And pregnant 19-year-old Annabelle, who was taken from her parents at the age of five, is adamant that her own unborn child won't experience a life in care.

Catch up via Sky Go/Now
A treat for fans of 80s indie music: Edwyn Collins is the friend helping the Moirs this week. In search of the golden eagle in western Scotland, they meet the Orange Juice frontman for an outdoor art session and lots of laughs. Just like the Four Tops, they can't help themselves.

Painting is therapeutic for Collins, who suffered a brain haemorrhage in 2005, and his oystercatcher is superb.

Jim and Nancy have a go at screen printing and meet a ranger who counsels patience while looking for their elusive bird of prey on the Isle of Harris. Jim eyes up a landscape, but wind whips his watercolour away. Is his luck on the turn? MARK BRAXTON

DRAMA

The Lost Language of Cranes

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer
If you're a student of LGBTQ+ history, this remarkable BBC film, rarely seen since 1992, should really be on your syllabus. Adapted by Sean Mathias from David Leavitt's novel, it features a sensitive performance from Brian Cox as middle-aged academic Owen, who is married to Rose (Eileen Atkins, also terrific) but is secretly gay – a fact he can no longer conceal after their son comes out to them.

Enriched by cameos for Cathy Tyson and John Schlesinger (director of Sunday, Bloody Sunday), Cranes provides a window into a London now all but gone – and is a testament to the talent of its director Nigel Finch, who died of an Aids-related illness in 1995. PATRICK MULKERN

Natural History Museum: World of Wonder

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5
"If someone thinks of science as boring," chirps Kat of the Natural History Museum as she caresses some fossilised dinosaur poo, "then they haven't found the right area of science to get them excited." It's precisely that mixture of geeky enthusiasm and expert knowledge set against a mission to educate as well as entertain that makes the museum and its staff so beguiling.

In part one of this second series, narrated by Bill Nighy, we meet Erica McAlister of the Insects Division, who labels some of the museum's 4,500 different types of flies before actually swallowing one. Meanwhile the Earth Science Department's Ashley King thinks he may have found the key to life as we know it in a meteorite that landed in a Cotswolds village. There's no hint of staff rivalries or budget pressures, and it all leaves you feeling warm inside. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

FILM REVIEWS

Lady Bird ★★★★★ 10.00-11.30pm BBC3 15

COMEDY DRAMA Saoirse Ronan stars in this coming-of-age film as a capricious Sacramento teenager who goes by the moniker "Lady Bird". She's a girl with big dreams and so-so talents, and we follow her through her final year at high school. At the story's core is Lady Bird's fractious but loving relationship with her mother (Laurie Metcalf), which swings from tenderness to vitriol. Scripted with a deft balance of laudable wit and authentic angst, this is a colourful and largely convention-defying film from the talented writer/director Greta Gerwig and is infused with the rosy glow of nostalgia. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2017, swearing, nudity, HD)

The Battle of the Sexes ★★★★★ 12 noon-1.40pm
Sky Documentaries PG

DOCUMENTARY This illuminating film focuses on the 1973 clash between tennis champ Billie Jean King and former Wimbledon winner Bobby Riggs. Using archive footage, talking-head interviews and (frankly unnecessary) reconstructions, it reveals the lasting impact of the match, not only for gender equality in sport but also society in general. JEREMY ASPINALL (UK/US 2013)

Danger Within ★★★★★ 2.50-4.50pm Legend U

WAR This combination of prison-break movie and whodunnit is set in a PoW camp in 1943, where inmates Richard Attenborough and Bernard Lee turn in good performances in this PoW camp drama with a twist. Review, right. (1958, U) 5.00 Star Trek 6.00pm Star Trek: the Next Generation TV sci-fi adventure. 7.00 Battlestar Galactica TV sci-fi adventure series. 8.00 Walker, Texas Ranger TV action drama with Chuck Norris. 9.00 He Who Dares ★ Gung-ho Brit action thriller that sees an SAS team working to bust a gang that kidnapped the PM's daughter. ## Red Joan ★★

(starts 12.15am in N Ireland) 12

SPY Judi Dench is well cast in this otherwise drab melodrama "inspired" by the story of real-life British KGB agent Melita Norwood. She's remodelled here as Joan Stanley, who is arrested for treason as a pensioner and then tells her cliché-ridden story to the MI5 authorities. Dench gives it her all, and Sophie Cookson capably plays her in flashback, but it's all rather dreary. ALAN JONES (UK 2019, sex scenes, HD)

Resident Evil: the Final Chapter ★★★★★ 11.15pm-1.25am Great Movies 15

HORROR Writer/director Paul WS Anderson ends his video game-inspired zombie franchise in satisfying style. Milla Jovovich returns as Alice, who is given one last chance by the Red Queen computer to save humanity from being wiped out. The film is relentlessly paced and action-packed, with Anderson ticking every living-dead box with confidence. AJ (Ger/Aus/Fr/Can 2016, violence)

Heat and Dust ★★

11.20pm-2.00am Film4 15

DRAMA Receiving a rare showing tonight, James Ivory's film offers a twist on EM Forster's A Passage to India. Adapted by Ruth Prawer Jhabvala from her own novel, it sees an ex-BBC researcher (Julie Christie) travel to India to investigate her late great aunt (Greta Scacchi), who caused a scandal in the 1920s. The result is arty and exotic. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1982, violence, nudity, HD)

MOTERING

Bangers and Cash: Restoring Classics 8.00pm Yesterday Catch up via UKTV Play

It's quite the twist. Having peeked behind the scenes of classic car auctioneers Mathewsons for seven seasons, the second series of the Bangers and Cash spin-off finds the team taking matters into their own hands. They purchase one of the few remaining Mondeo Turbos, which is in such ravaged condition that its engine hasn't been started since the 1990s, and an original Shellmax globe that once perched atop a petrol pump.

The aim is to buy as cheaply as possible, restore, re-sell (via Mathewsons) and make a profit. Needless to say, and not merely because Derek Mathewson takes a detour to share his views on modern art ("I think most people out there know my views on Picasso"), everything doesn't go quite as planned.

Meanwhile, we revisit Spiney Norman, a scout troop's bus 50 years ago and before that, a transport that ferried RAF personnel from terminal to aircraft. The original auction went badly, but three years on, to the delight of a group of former sixers now in their 60s, restoration has given Norman a third lease of life. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

INTERVIEW

Amol Rajan Interviews: Piers Morgan

7.00pm BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

After last week's rather cosy chat with Richard Branson, Amol Rajan turns his attention to Piers Morgan. The tabloid editor turned presenter has been involved in no end of controversy in a career that's featured everything from phone-hacking allegations to walking out of Good Morning Britain on air. And that's all before really touching on Morgan's much publicised dislike for Meghan, Duchess of Sussex.

All of the above and more are covered here, but this is no spiky Paxman-esque grilling. Rajan is more interested in letting Morgan give his side of the story than he is in making him squirm. It's a gentle approach that gets Morgan waxing lyrical on his life and career. CERI THOMAS

SOAP

EastEnders

7.30pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

It's been a busy week in Walford, what with the coronation bash on Monday and now a special Eurovision party, at which Bucks Fizz star Cheryl Baker is the special guest. Why, you may well be asking? Well, Rocky has been left fretting because Sonia has pulled out of the performance. So he asks Jean, who also gives him a knockback. Hence Rocky putting in a call to a mystery contact, who turns out to be none other than the 1981 Eurovision Song Contest winner herself.

The trouble is, Jean decides at the last minute that she will take to the stage after all, only to be stymied by Cheryl. Well, Jean, you know what the old song says about making your mind up. DAVID BROWN

MUSIC

Eurovision Song Contest: Semi-Final

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The Eurovision semi-finals use a random draw to decide who will compete in which heat – and if you were placed in this one, you'd be rubbing your hands with glee. Almost all the frontrunners this year are lined up for Tuesday's semi-final, so a few wildcards might be able to slip through tonight.

Still, who knows? It could be that a dark horse from this semi (Armenia, anyone?) could end up seeing off Ukraine, Sweden and the rest and winning the whole thing. And in any case, a place in the final can be enough to give some Eurovision acts fame – or infamy – for life. The difference between musical immortality and pub quiz triviality could rest on tonight... HUW FULLERTON

Guilt

9.00pm BBC2 (also BBC Scotland Tue 10pm. Full series on iPlayer)

Max has decided to fight rather than flee and is now gunning for crime boss Maggie Lynch. Back in Edinburgh, he and Jake take refuge in unexpected quarters. Canny as ever, Max swiftly spots the connection between the Lynches and banker Jim Sturrock. He decides to capitalise on his discovery but is heading into the lion's den.

Aliza's doggedness pays off as she identifies the black hole at the heart of the National Bank of Caledonia. Yvonne the detective doesn't miss much, either, and presses Kenny for the truth, while the deliciously menacing Teddy is flipping sides faster than a herring on a griddle. There may be no winners in this game. One more episode to go. PATRICK MULKERN

ENTERTAINMENT

Taskmaster9.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

Does Frankie Boyle care about winning at all? The Scottish comic's lack of competitive spirit is highlighted early by host Greg Davies in this episode, though it's been clear for a few weeks that he's much more interested in delivering downbeat one-liners than pulping eggs, or sculpting animals from food (to pick two tasks at random this week).

But perhaps there's method to the madness. Off-air, in a new interview Boyle has revealed that his secret gameplan was to do well every week, but never well enough that he'd win an episode and have to go onstage to awkwardly pose with that week's prizes. Only time will tell if he (under) achieves his goal... HF

DRAMA

Dalgliesh9.00pm Channel 5

Catch up via My5

As good as Dalgliesh is, it feels like an odd fit for Channel 5, especially when compared to the rest of its drama output. It's not cosy like All Creatures Great and Small, and it doesn't have the trashy potboiler allure of, say, Riptide or The Catch. No, Dalgliesh is much more understated and sombre, to the extent that I worry it won't get seen by the audience it deserves.

And this last two-parter – set in a stuffy family-run museum – is worthy of a decent-sized overnight rating as it's the best mystery so far and one filled with the kind of haunting, macabre imagery that PD James made a speciality. Catch the concluding part tomorrow at 9.00pm. DB

ANTHOLOGY

Inside No 9

10.00pm (11.15pm in N Ireland)

BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer; series 1–7 also available

Claire Rushbrook is the focus in tonight's edition and sympathetic as Vicky, a care worker looking for love. She spends an evening in with a glass of red wine, tentatively venturing onto Palm Dates, an online speed-dating site. A procession of ripe characters pop up on her laptop. None seems a likely match, but could one of them be the Lonely Hearts Killer mentioned on the news?

Teetering skilfully between the hilarious and the cruel, Love Is a Stranger offers juicy guest spots for Mathew Horne, Frances Barber and Asim Chaudhry. Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith mint a couple of cracking new characters, too. PM

COMEDY DRAMA

The Curse10.00, 10.35pm C4

SERIES FINALE

The Brink's Mat-inspired caper's second series, set on Spain's Costal del Crime, climaxes with a double bill that's as big on all-action thrills as comedy. Someone even gets to utter the immortal line, "Say hello to my little friend". As Albert and the boys head out to sea to make the gold-for-cocaine trade with Pablo Escobar's Colombian cartel, Tash (Emer Kenny) receives an unwelcome visitor, spinning the story into its propulsive home stretch.

Cue gunfights, police raids and plot twists. Some characters won't make it out alive. Others wind up behind bars. Period trimmings include new-fangled Motorola pagers. An evocative soundtrack features the Cure, Yazoo and INXS. Who'll end up with the "cursed" gold bullion? And will anyone be left standing for a third series? MICHAEL HOGAN

ALL AT SEA
Can criminal "mastermind" Albert Fantoni (Alan Mustafa) stop his plans going overboard?

FILM OF THE DAY

Kingsman: the Golden Circle ★★★

ACTION This sequel to Kingsman: the Secret Service sees former tearaway Eggsy (Taron Egerton) now a top agent for the British spy network. Eggsy's skills are put to the test when he uncovers the toxic plans of the villainous Poppy (Julianne Moore), forcing a team-up with transatlantic counterparts the Statesmen (Jeff Bridges, Halle Berry, Channing Tatum and The Last of Us star Pedro Pascal, pictured). The action comes thick and fast, and a cameoing Elton John is a hoot as he sends himself up something rotten. JEREMY ASPINALL (UK/US 2017, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Wanted for Murder

★★★★ 9.30-11.35am

PG

THRILLER Eric Portman is on fine form here as the descendant of a hangman who strangles young women in London. Roland Culver is a skilful adversary as the Scotland Yard inspector who slowly, patiently closes in on his man. The film makes superb use of its London locations, including a climax near the Serpentine in Hyde Park. ALLEN EYLES (UK 1946, BW)

They Rode West ★★★

1.00-2.45pm Great Action U

WESTERN Medical ethics come under the microscope in the tale of a cavalry doctor (Robert Francis) who uses his skills to help Kiowa Indians – to the disgust of the soldiers at his fort. The cast includes Donna Reed, and it's capably directed by Phil Karlson. Tragically, Francis was killed at the age of 25 in a plane crash soon after the film's release. TONY SLOMAN (US 1954)

Bulldog Drummond at Bay

★★★★ 3.10-4.45pm

MYSTERY Fourteen actors played gentleman adventurer Captain Hugh Drummond between 1922-69, with this being John Lodge's sole outing. It sees Drummond and sidekick Algy Longworth (Claud Allister) on the trail of a gunrunning pacifist group who have kidnapped an inventor. Victor Jory and Hugh Miller make suitably hissable villains. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1937, BW)

Von Ryan's Express ★★★

PG

WAR This rattlingly exciting Second World War adventure has a well cast Frank Sinatra as a tough PoW who seizes a German train transporting Allied prisoners. Sinatra gives a committed performance, and the support cast is well chosen: Trevor Howard is excellent as a British officer, while John Leyton's turn as a lieutenant provides a nod to his role in The Great Escape. TS (US 1965, may be edited for content, HD)

The Ghost of Rashmon

★★ 6.55-8.00pm

Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA This tricky chiller stars Valentine Dyall as a "paranormalist" called in by newlyweds to remove the curse from their home. With only meagre resources to play with, most of the eerie effects are achieved by lighting changes and good old-fashioned dissolves. That said, the ghostly visions are effective. DP (UK 1948, BW)

The Living Daylights ★★★

PG

SPY Timothy Dalton's take on James Bond is endearingly human: he sweats, he bleeds and he falls in love – with Czech cellist Kara (Maryam D'Abo). The story segues from Soviet defection and arms dealing to the struggles of the Mujahidin, and is rooted more in reality than other series entries. The finale is a little lame, but this is one of 007's more underrated escapades. MARK BRAXTON (UK 1987, violence, nudity, HD)

Fast &amp; Furious 6 ★★

12

ACTION Franchise fatigue was beginning to show in this fifth sequel in the street-racing series. Between deafening set pieces (highlight: a tank chase on a Spanish motorway), the pit-stop banter falls flat, while Welshman Luke Evans fails to make an impact as the ex-SAS baddie. The latest film in the series, Fast X, turbos into cinemas next week. ANDREW COLLINS (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

Film Stars Don't Die in Liverpool ★★★★★

DRAMA This beautifully constructed true-life romance charts the love affair between fading (and ailing) Hollywood beauty Gloria Grahame (an icon of classic noirs like The Big Heat) and Liverpoolian actor Peter Turner in late-1970s Britain. Witty but also moving, it's anchored by fearless, Bafta-nominated performances from Annette Bening and Jamie Bell as the unlikely of couples. JA (UK 2017, swearing, nudity, col/BW, HD)

Sky Cinema picks

Sabrina ★★★★★

DOCUMENTARY Hidden Treasures of the National Trust

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

Every year, millions of us flock to the houses and gardens of the National Trust – and if this new series has anything to do with it, next year there'll be millions more. Following on from Secrets of the Museum, this revels in the splendour of the UK's most magnificent houses and gardens. Several of them will remind you of Downton Abbey, which is why drafting in Jim Carter, aka Carson the butler, on voiceover duties, feels good and proper.

The welcome surprise is that the NT properties in the spotlight aren't all in the palatial pile category. In this first episode, which ranges across England, we get to see everything from wallpaper restoration in Paul McCartney's childhood two-up two-down to the rebuilding of a Chinese bridge at Biddulph Grange Garden, near Stoke-on-Trent. The range of craft skills required to keep, say, the 11,000-plus volumes in Belton House's library up to snuff is amazing, but most of all it's the chocolate-box photography that will make you want to renew that NT membership and jump in the car.

Iolo's Borderlands

EPISODE

On the final stage of Iolo Williams's trek, the naturalist has reached north-east Wales. This area may lack the forests and mountains of further south, but Iolo still finds plenty to relish in the marshes, bogs and sand dunes.

There are shimmering dragonflies and super-agile hobby falcons duelling in flight, as well as male black grouse squabbling as they perform their mating dance (or lek) to attract the supremely indifferent females. Most striking of all, though, are the glowing green sand lizards spotted in the dunes. Even Iolo has to admit that these super-rare reptiles – vibrant, exotic and alien – feel like the last thing you would expect to see in Wales. CERI THOMAS

The Big Interiors Battle

8.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

A slightly different challenge and a chance for the remaining five designers to meet the neighbours this week. Instead of making over a room in the apartment they hope they'll eventually win, they must work together to redesign a local community café and performance space. Is judge Dara Huang mad? The designers' styles are so different, how will one person's eye-popping colour sit with another's country house chic? After three days of miscommunication, panic and doubts but little co-operation or compromise – or, as Dara sums it up, “zero teamwork” – the final look is a right old mish-mash, so anyone of them could be locked out of their flat... and the competition. JANE RACKHAM

Susan Calman's Grand Day Out

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

Susan Calman says she became a stand-up comedian because of Billy Connolly and The Muppet Show's Fozzie Bear. So she's beyond excited to come face to face with the latter at Newby Hall's teddy bear museum. She cheerfully admits she's visited Yorkshire many times before but thinks she's overlooked some hidden gems. While I'm not sure that York Minster is exactly hidden, it certainly is a gem.

Susan's trip (encompassing golf football, walking barefoot and blindfolded through an arboretum and trying a Fat Rascal at Harrogate institution Betty's) is such a whirlwind of laughter, whoops of joy and unbounded enthusiasm that it will either delight or irritate. JR

DRAMA

Dalgliesh

9.00pm Channel 5
Catch up via My5

EPISODE

Murder mysteries are quite a conservative genre, really. In solving a case, a detective is essentially apprehending a transgressor and preserving the social order. So, it oughtn't to be a surprise that PD James, in life a Tory peer, thrived within the genre. And here, in the conclusion to The Murder Room, we seem to glean some of her sensibilities in the plot, which intimates that death is an inevitable consequence of licentious behaviour.

You can almost imagine James tut-tutting when mapping out the motives, though Dalgliesh (Bertie Carvel) is more strident in his disgust, flying uncharacteristically into a rage when grilling a suspect. DAVID BROWN

This celebration of Liverpool's fecund pop legacy kicks off with Paul McCartney at the BBC, a judiciously curated look at Macca's post-Beatles career. Memorable TV performances of hits including Live and Let Die, Jet and Band on the Run are accompanied by a lively encounter between the man himself and super-fan Bob Mortimer. Two national treasures for the price of one. The Mersey Sound: Rock Family Trees follows at 10.30pm, which traces the fascinating rise and fall of the 1960s Merseybeat scene. And at 11.20pm is Everything: the Real Thing Story – a terrific, rather bittersweet documentary about one of Britain's greatest soul, funk and disco acts. PAUL WHITELAW

DRAMA*Astrid: Murder in Paris9.00pm More4

Catch up via C4 streaming

Puzzle-loving Astrid obviously relishes these convoluted murder mysteries, but detective Raphaëlle must sometimes wish she had a straightforward death to solve instead. A simple shooting by a jealous spouse or an interrupted burglary, perhaps? Not this time.

At an exclusive auction, a valuable eighth-century book appears to catch fire – as does the auctioneer, who drops down dead. In fact, it's not an arson attack – he's been poisoned and, to add to the mystery, there's a tarot card in his pocket. As always, the case is very complicated, with an ancient secret society and mind-boggling codes for Astrid to work out. It's all a bit Da Vinci Code. JR

COMEDY DRAMA*Black Ops9.30pm (11.30pm Wales) BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

Bumbling undercover cops (or rather, community support officers) Dom and Kay are in a bind. Now working for a gang and with a body on their hands, they need to prove their innocence before corrupt officers on their force take them down... or the gang members murder them. Next stop: amputation, failed burglary and a children's nature walk gone wrong.

Stars Gbemisola Ikumelo and Hammed Animashaun have fun chemistry, and there's clearly a lot of talent behind this show. But as the story lurches from one slapstick setpiece to another, you can't help but wish for a few more chuckles, or more originality. So far, not entirely arresting. HUW FULLERTON

CHAT SHOW*The Chris and Rosie Ramsey Show 10.40pm (11.10pm N Ireland) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayerNEW SERIES

It's not easy to get a new chat show off the ground, but last year stand-up comedian Chris Ramsey managed it, by approaching the problem from a new angle. He co-presented with wife Rosie, who would have been unfamiliar to most BBC2 viewers – unless, of course, they were listeners of Shagged Married Annoyed, the hit podcast that inspired the TV show. The both-partners dynamic was in play with the guests, too: Martin Kemp, Craig Revel Horwood and Fleur East were among the celebs who revealed something about themselves because they'd brought their other halves along, for wine-fuelled gossips about the minutiae of their domestic lives. The Ramseys had a hit, so much so that they're now on BBC1, airing in the same slot as The Graham Norton Show. Expect the laughs and spilt secrets to keep flowing.

FILM OF THE DAY

Enemy of the State ★★★★★

9.00-11.40pm 5 Star

THRILLER Expert direction by Tony Scott and a winning central performance by Will Smith give this cracking movie plenty of edge and appeal. When an incriminating tape revealing the murder of congressman Jason Robards accidentally ends up in Smith's possession, he finds himself pursued by corrupt Jon Voight and his posse of electronic trackers. Only retired spook Gene Hackman can help the desperate Smith survive. The Fugitive meets The Conversation in this dynamic adventure that's both intriguing and scarily thought-provoking. ALAN JONES (US 1998, violence, swearing, HD)

Born Free ★★★★★

U

BIOPIC Prettily shot by director James Hill in Kenya, this adaptation of Joy Adamson's memoir is one of the great animal films. The human performances are also first rate, with Virginia McKenna and Bill Travers bringing real warmth to their roles. The scenes where Elsa the lioness takes her first steps back into the wild are sure to bring a lump to the throat.

DAVID PARKINSON (US/UK 1966, HD)

Apache Drums ★★★

2.25-4.00pm 5 Action

U

WESTERN This frontier tale is darker than many of its ilk, perhaps owing to the involvement of veteran horror producer Val Lewton. Stephen McNally plays the ne'er-do-well who is run out of town, only to return and help out when Apaches attack. Director Hugo Fregonese isn't daunted by the low budget, and the short running time helps keep the tension taut.

TONY SLOMAN (US 1951)

Frankenstein Meets the Wolf Man ★★★★★

3.00-4.30pm Legend

PG

HORROR The fifth feature in Universal's series was the first time two celebrity monsters shared the screen. The story sees werewolf Lon Chaney Jr something much classier.

ANDREW COLLINS (US 2012, swearing, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

Everything: The Real Thing Story ★★★★★

15

DOCUMENTARY Liverpool quartet The Real Thing were one of the first all-black British bands to top the charts with You to Me Are Everything in 1976. Simon Sheridan's engrossing film chronicles the group's rise to fame, the racial barriers they faced, and their struggle to be taken seriously with more politically themed material. TERRY STAUNTON (UK 2019, swearing, racist language, HD)

The Monuments Men ★★

11.25pm-1.15am BBC1

(starts 12 midnight in Wales, 12.05am in N Ireland, )

DRAMA This affectionate wartime tale has a remarkable fact-based premise: a 1945 Allied "treasure hunt" for artworks stolen by the Nazis. George Clooney directs himself alongside a terrific cast (Matt Damon, Cate Blanchett, Bill Murray), but his dry fidelity to the story and its episodic structure means the movie never coheres into a satisfying whole. AC (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

Carrie ★★★★★

12.10-1.50am C4

18

HORROR Brian De Palma's modern gothic fairy tale stars Sissy Spacek as a telekinetic Cinderella, who turns her school prom into a bloody massacre after a macabre joke is played on her by vicious teens. Despite a much-copied plot and even more copied climax, De Palma's movie remains a transfixing experience. AJ (US 1976, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

The CoronationFrom 10.00am Radio 4

AS THE DAUGHTER of a vicar and a member of a church choir, Eleanor Oldroyd knows her way round hymns and prayers, naves and altars. Even so, to be the voice of BBC radio inside Westminster Abbey as the coronation takes place will be a test of both her ecclesiastical and her broadcasting credentials.

"It's obviously going to be a massive thing to do," says Oldroyd. "And an incredible privilege and honour." As a sports broadcaster, she has a ready analogy to hand. "I guess it's a bit like if you're an England cricketer and you're going out to bat at Lord's in the most important Test match of your life. You can't allow yourself to be overawed by the venue or by the occasion. You can't lose your nerve. Hopefully you'll feel you've done the preparation and got the tools at your disposal for that not to happen."

Experience will count for a lot: Oldroyd has four royal funerals and three royal weddings on her broadcasting CV. Her appointment to the top radio job at the coronation comes on the back of her commentary from St George's Chapel last September as the Queen's funeral reached its final stage. "That was pretty weighty," she says. "I felt wrung out afterwards. But it makes a big difference to have done it."

Oldroyd's preparations for the coronation have included reading a number of books – notably historian Roy Strong's Coronation: a History of the British Monarchy – and taking a two-hour tour of Westminster Abbey with a friend who is training to be a guide there. "There's so much to know, not just about the ceremony but about the building itself. It's about knowing the tombs of kings and queens going back a thousand years; about knowing your Purbeck marble from your Portland stone."

Her commentary position will be in the triforium, a galleried area 52 feet above the abbey floor that she expects to occupy from 7am, taking up her position four hours ahead of the two-hour ceremony. Dare one ask about accessing a loo? "Yes, I need an answer to that myself!"

Oldroyd says it's amazing to think that she will be the first person to provide the radio commentary on a coronation since John Snagge in 1953. Like

'IT'S LIKE BATTLING AT LORD'S'

Sports commentator Eleanor Oldroyd faces her trickiest radio innings yet – inside Westminster Abbey

Oldroyd, Snagge was best known as a sports commentator, indelibly associated with the Oxford-Cambridge Boat Race. "There's quite a tradition of this," says Oldroyd. "Sports commentary is all about being able to convey what's happening as it's happening, to operate in the moment without a script and paint an immediate picture. But with the coronation it will also be about knowing when to shut up – about not talking over the Archbishop of Canterbury or the music."

FOR ALL THAT she shares a common background with Snagge, there's one obvious difference. "I think it's inconceivable that even 20 years ago this role would have gone to a woman," she says. "The assumption always was that no female commentator could have the gravitas or the authority of a man. If this moment proves how wrong that is, then I'll be glad."

She will also be glad if she no longer has to cover any more royal jubilees – not because she doesn't find them great events to be involved in but because during the Queen's reign they always occurred around the time of Oldroyd's birthday, and time and again her own celebrations had to take second place to the demands of her job. On 2 June 2022, when she turned 60, much of her big day was spent at a rehearsal for the Queen's Platinum Jubilee service. "I've worked on so many of my big birthdays!"

Now 6 May becomes a significant day for her – it will always be the anniversary of when she reached what she calls the pinnacle of her career. And high up in Westminster Abbey, the newly crowned King Charles III far down below, could not be a more appropriate place for it.

MUSIC*Eurovision Song Contest Semi-Finals

Tuesday, Thursday 8.00pm Radio 2

You can tell Eurovision matters this year. For the first time, Radio 2 will broadcast the semi-finals with Paddy O'Connell (above, right) helping live coverage. Some 31 countries will be battling for a place in the final, where they will join the six getting a free pass, including last year's winners Ukraine and hosts UK. Also on Radio 2, Zoe Ball, Scott Mills and co take turns to bring their shows from Liverpool, with guests such as Mae Muller (above, left, who's singing the UK's entry) and, movingly, a collection of Ukrainian artists. CAROLINE FROST

DRAMA*Drama on 3: She Stoops to Conquer Sun 7.30pm Radio 3

Billed as a "very free adaptation of Oliver Goldsmith's comedy of class and clever women", this reimagined but recognisable version by Barunka O'Shaughnessy is a joy. The magnificently grand Pippa Bennett-Warner, as the daughter in need of a husband, is joined by a cast of natural comedians, including Robert Bathurst as her father and Mathew Baynton and Hugh Skinner as potential suitors. Just as pleasing is the music, arranged by Joseph Atkins, with the running gag of Sarah Gabriel's soprano rendition of Single Ladies. FIONA HUGHES

DOCUMENTARY*Front Lines of Journalism

Monday-Friday 1.45pm Radio 4

As a longtime reporter on the Middle East, Jeremy Bowen (above) knows more than most people how contentious a concept the truth is when it comes to journalism. The broadcaster's new ten-part series is a valiant attempt to find answers to such huge questions as whether there can ever be such a thing as impartiality. Those offering their own take on the matter include a predictably feisty Piers Morgan and a more measured Dean Baquet, grandee of The New York Times.

SIMON O'HAGAN*SOAP*The Archers

Sunday-Friday 7.00pm Radio 4

Friday's unexpected arrival of Rylan Clark (above), dropping in to judge the Eurovision variety show on his way to Liverpool, may be the headline-grabbing story, but there's plenty going on elsewhere. There's trouble at Lower Loxley as Freddie stands accused and Elizabeth gets a grilling that could have lasting consequences, and the Horrobins have a torrid time when Brad faces humiliation and Tracy goes too far. Meanwhile, a resident hears some worrying news... DAVID CRAWFORD

REAL-LIFE DOCUMENTARY Mother, Neighbor, Russian Spy

Rosamund Pike delves into the duplicity of suburban mom and finance pro Cindy Murphy, a Russian sleeper agent lurking behind a carefully crafted, all-American shell. Set against a backdrop of Putin's rise, this nine-part podcast strikes a sympathetic note as it tries to put us in Cindy's shoes. Pike brings smoky-voiced sophistication and personal touches, though overeggs her fascination. If the execution can be unsubtle, the story grips from the off, with invaluable insights from espionage experts. EMMA SIMMONDS

Wiser Than Me with Julia Louis-Dreyfus

It isn't fair that Julia Louis-Dreyfus gets to cut her interviewing teeth on people like Jane Fonda and Fran Lebowitz rather than the least articulate member of a boy band. Still, this is what happens when America's funniest and most glamorous comic actress, star of Seinfeld and Veep, decides she's going to seek wisdom from women older than she is. The big names line up and the big sponsors aren't far behind. They volunteer things to a peer they wouldn't tell just anybody. Lebowitz, who's 72, confesses she's been unfaithful to every lover she's ever had. Fonda, 85, reckons she would no longer be able to get naked in front of a new lover. The funny thing is, nobody asked. DAVID HEPWORTH

BUSINESS

Sliced Bread Presents: Toast

Because Brits are supposed to have a fondness for heroic failure, it's no wonder perhaps that this other-side-of-the-coin spin-off from Sliced Bread – the show that examines the supposedly greatest achievements since the eponymous baking breakthrough – has proved equally popular. In Toast, BBC business journalist Sean Farrington examines the enterprises that went down the drain and asks why? Blockbuster we know about. But what about Google Glass? DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

ARCHIVE

Desert Island Discs with Barry Humphries

Barry Humphries, who died on 22 April aged 89, held the accolade of being the only person to have appeared on Desert Island Discs as two different people – as himself in 2009 and in 1988 as Dame Edna Everage. Unsurprisingly the latter episode is more riotous, with Edna having fun at Sue Lawley's expense, while Humphries is more heartfelt with Kirsty Young. His Forgotten Musical Masterpieces are also on BBC Sounds. DAVID CRAWFORD

HISTORY

Dan Snow's History Hit

Whether marking an anniversary, giving historical background to current affairs or just choosing his subject on a whim, in History Hit Dan Snow and his guests hop around the past. His successful daily 20–30 minute podcast has grown into a network of the same name with its own video-on-demand subscription service and a prodigious output. To mark the crowning of Charles III and Camilla, History Hit has released special episodes and podcasts on all aspects of coronations through the ages. FIONA HUGHES

Celebrating Eurovision

While the BBC's tireless Eurovisioncast team has been knocking out at least one podcast a week since January ahead of this year's Contest in Liverpool, this complementary series sees things definitely cranking up a gear, with some feature-length deep-dives into delightfully random elements – from a walk down memory lane with Norway's 2009 winner Alexander Rybak (still the winner by the largest margin) to the history of Ireland's triumphs. Altogether now, what's another year? CAROLINE FROST

SCIENCE

Searching for Cosmic Dust

Available from 30 April

How far would you go to challenge scientific consensus? For a hundred years it was believed that particles of cosmic dust could only be found frozen in the Arctic ice. But when Norwegian Jon Larsen saw a tiny particle land on his breakfast table it sparked an obsessive search to prove the theory wrong. Initially ignored by field expert Matt Genge, this series charts the eccentric tale of how one man defied convention to prove alien fragments are among us. TOM GOULDING

REAL WHODUNNITS

Detectives Don't Sleep

Fans of true crime and film noir should relish this series of real-life whodunnits, all narrated in the style of a hard-boiled Hollywood thriller. The first episode features Prohibition-era sleuth Ellis Parker – renowned as “America’s Sherlock Holmes” – and the case of a pickled corpse found in the New Jersey Pine Barrens. Meanwhile, the two-part Murder in Paradise is a doozy and finds a cast of tycoons, Nazis and a former King of England embroiled in the grisly demise of a billionaire in the Bahamas in 1943.

The power of two, from domestic couples to political pundits

ONE OF THE very first podcasts I ever heard was Keith and the Girl. This was in 2005. Back then the idea of a couple letting you in on their relationship seemed fresh and exciting. All these years later their podcast is still going. Keith and the girl, however, are no longer a couple. This is not a major surprise, as any of us who’ve ever attempted to regale friends with humorous accounts of our significant others will readily attest. You’ve been there. One party makes a remark about the other snoring, the stakes are quickly raised and soon it’s “Wait till I get you home” time. Imagine that but with thousands listening.

Nevertheless, strong forces impel couples to host podcasts. They arrive in the same cab for a start. There’s also the fact that sponsors are more interested in reaching women than men. A recent episode of The Therapy Crouch, with former footballer Peter Crouch and his wife Abbey, was sponsored by a romcom and thus the first words Peter spoke were, “Big fans of the old romcom, aren’t we, Ab?”

Sometimes you wish couples weren’t always so competitive, that one partner would use their experience to just get the other one talking. There is a place for inconsequential domestic chatter, but it sometimes seems that each party in The Wittering Whitehalls – Michael and Hilary – doesn’t wholly trust the other to monopolise the microphone.

NOT ALL MARRIED couples make great podcasters, but all great podcast teams behave like married couples. In The Rest Is Politics, Rory Stewart lets Alastair Campbell appear to win the argument but then adds his rebuttal later on, having quietly slipped the lead in the sock while his more loquacious partner is engaged in holding forth. In The Rest Is History, Tom Holland is the indefatigable Tigger to Dominic Sandbrook’s Eeyore. In Conan O’Brien Needs a Friend, the comedian’s long-time PA, Sona Movsesian, performs the spouse-like service of regularly cutting him down to size. But what makes all these relationships work is the fact that once the microphone is turned off, they don’t go home together.

Opera on 3: Dvorak's Rusalka

6.30pm Radio 3

In setting a libretto that cleverly conflates various elements of the Undine, Melusine and Little Mermaid fairy tales, Dvorak accepted one of the strangest challenges in all opera: a heroine who loses her voice about three-quarters of the way through Act 1 and must then remain mute throughout most of Act 2. He thus deprived himself of the chance to write the expected love duet for Rusalka to sing with the handsome prince for whom the besotted water nymph has sacrificed her ability to express her feelings. Yet Dvorak amply compensates for this loss with the yearning lyricism of his heroine's famous "Song to the Moon" and the heart-stopping poignancy of the final bars in which she kisses her errant prince's life away and accepts her own accursed fate.

8.50 Live from Westminster Abbey RT Katie Derham presents coverage of the coronation, beginning with live music from Westminster Abbey, with John Eliot Gardiner conducting the Monteverdi Choir and English Baroque Soloists in a pre-service programme of choral music. Antonio Pappano then conducts the Coronation Orchestra in a programme which includes new pieces of music commissioned by the King. At the King's request, the Coronation Orchestra is made up of musicians from across the UK and Canada, drawn from eight orchestras of the former Prince of Wales's Patronages, including the Philharmonia Orchestra, Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, BBC National Orchestra of Wales, Regina Symphony Orchestra (Saskatchewan, Canada), English Chamber Orchestra, Scottish Chamber Orchestra, Royal Opera House Orchestra and Welsh National Opera Orchestra. Soloists include royal harpist Alis Huws, soprano Pretty Yende and bass-baritone Bryn Terfel. The first pre-service commission is a short overture by Judith Weir, Master of the King's Music, and there is also music by Karl Jenkins, Sarah Class, Nigel Hess, Roderick Williams, Shirley J Thompson, Iain Farrington, Patrick Doyle, Paul Mealor, Debbie Wiseman, Andrew Lloyd Webber, Roxanna Panufnik and Tarik O'Regan.
10.50 The Coronation of Their Majesties King Charles III and Queen Camilla RT The main service is directed by Andrew Nethsingha, organist and master of the choristers of Westminster Abbey, and features the expanded choral forces of the Choir of Westminster Abbey and the Choir of His Majesty's Chapel Royal, St James's Palace, girl choristers from Truro Cathedral and Methodist College, Belfast, joined by singers from the Monteverdi Choir. The organ is played by Westminster Abbey sub-organist Peter Holder and assistant organist, Matthew Jorysz. A series of fanfares marking ceremonial moments in the service has been written by Christopher Robinson, performed by the Fanfare Trumpeters of the Royal Air Force, conducted by Wing Commander Piers Morrell. The Ascension Choir also performs and the King's Scholars of Westminster School proclaim the traditional "Vivat" acclamations. At the request of His Majesty, Greek Orthodox music also features, performed by the Byzantine Chant Ensemble. In a programme of music informed by King Charles III, Paul Mealor's Coronation Kyrie marks the first Welsh-language performance at a coronation, sung by bass-baritone Bryn Terfel and the Choir of Westminster Abbey. Plus newly commissioned music by Debbie Wiseman, Andrew Lloyd Webber, Roxanna Panufnik and Tarik O'Regan, and music that historically has featured in the service across four centuries, including Byrd, Handel, Elgar, Walford Davies, Walton, Parry and Vaughan Williams. ## TODAY'S CHOICES

Bird Brain of Britain

4.30pm Radio 4

This one-off special sets out to sort the wheatears from the chaffinches as host Russell Davies tests a panel of expert and amateur bird lovers on avian trivia. Recorded at Sir Peter Scott's famous centre at Slimbridge, Gloucestershire, the contenders will be quizzed on their knowledge of famous cultural bird references as well as what they know about bird life around us. At a time when interest in birds and the awareness of the risks to their habitats are soaring, these contestants give a new meaning to the phrase bird-brained. TOM GOULDING

The Story of the Little Book

11.00pm Radio 3

Prima la musica e poi le parole – "First the music, then the words" – was the title of a famous operatic parody by Mozart's rival Salieri, and it probably still reflects the priorities of most opera-lovers even today. But Emma Jenkins, an opera director as well as author of a few libretti, is here determined to establish the primacy of the "little book" that most composers (the likes of Wagner and Tippett excepted) require to fire their musical imaginations. MARK PAPPENHEIM

TODAY'S CHOICES

Book of the Week: Hands of Time

9.45am Radio 4 FM
Artisanal watchmaking is a critically endangered skill, according to one of its few modern-day exponents, Rebecca Struthers. But Struthers is not just a master of tiny moving parts – she also knows how to put together a book, and with Hands of Time, which is part memoir and part history, she has created something as beautiful as any timepiece. Reader Phoebe Pryce captures the sense of mystery that lies at the heart of the subject as Struthers takes us into the Birmingham workshop where she and her husband practise their craft, before transporting us back to the age of the ancient Sumerians, who we can thank for the concept of the 60-second minute.

SIMON O'HAGAN

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3
Mozart's majestic "Coronation" Mass makes a timely appearance in tonight's Berlin Philharmonic concert featuring British soprano Louise Alder, who sang at Her Late Majesty's Coronation Festival Gala at Buckingham Palace in 2013, four years before scooping the Audience Prize at BBC Cardiff Singer of the World. But first she is also the soloist in the flamboyantly operatic motet Exsultate, jubilate that Mozart wrote for the Italian castrato Venanzio Rauzzini, who ended his days as a respected singing teacher-cum-concert promoter in Bath. MARK PAPPENHEIM

TODAY'S CHOICES

Sound Towns

11.30am Radio 4

The Cool Cymru movement of the 1990s is often unfairly viewed as a subcategory of Britpop. But the music scene, which gave rise to bands like Super Furry Animals, Gorky's Zygotic Mynci and the Cerys Matthews (above) fronted Catatonia, developed organically and would never have happened without the DIY scene in Newport. This programme traces the town's role in this explosion of Welsh talent from the word-of-mouth buzz around bands like the Cowboy Killers to Newport being labelled the "New Seattle" by New York Times rock critic Neil Strauss. TOM GOULDING

The New Gurus

9.00am Radio 4

With the preachings of "gurus" like Andrew Tate infecting the minds of millions of young men, something very disturbing is clearly going on, and it's admirable how calmly and analytically Helen Lewis goes about trying to get to the bottom of it. She even attends a jujitsu class in an attempt to discover the martial art's place in the so-called manosphere. Her deliberately provocative contention that "women have friends, and men have podcasts" yields results in that the men she interviews get certainly get their say. SIMON O'HAGAN

Good Evening Europe

9.30am/8.05pm World Service
Swedish 2007 Eurovision winner Mans Zelterlow talks to other past winners.

TODAY'S CHOICES

So Bad It's Good?

8.00pm Radio 4 Extra
In this enjoyable broadcast from 2020, comedian Steve Punt and guests Grace Dent, Robin Ince and Laura Snapes hail the bad, the iffy and the cheesy from film, music and literature. Michael Winner's Parting Shots (Chris Rea as a homicidal photographer!), 70s Euro-pudding Horror Express and "that cursed film" Cats are just a few of the movies up for appreciation. Songs by the likes of Rick Astley (above) and Taylor Swift also receive warm ribbing while the Killer Crab pulp fiction of Guy N Smith and the love poetry of Danielle Steele are put in the spotlight for a change. It's a stimulating debate which encourages Punt to ponder why we love our not-so-guilty pleasures. Is it sincerity of intent or self-awareness? Is it the nostalgia factor? Or just the lure of the laughable? JEREMY ASPINALL

An Imaginative Experience

10.00am/3.00pm Radio 4 Extra
Author Mary Wesley is best known for her 1984 novel The Camomile Lawn, sensationally adapted by Channel 4 in 1992. What was to be Wesley's penultimate novel, 1994's An Imaginative Experience, was adapted for radio in 1995 but this has been the book's only dramatisation to date. Listening again to this wildly uninhibited story of guilt-ridden widow Julia (Sylvestra Le Touzel) and her unorthodox relationships with her mother, her employer, Mr and Mrs Patel, who run the corner shop, and more, I wondered why Wesley's late work hasn't been rediscovered. Surely one day it will be. She truly was the literary mistress of every aspect of human nature. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

1.45 Front Lines of Journalism

3/10. It Can't Have All Been for Nothing

Journalism can often mean pushing your way into people's lives at their worst moments. Without a good reason, it's tourism. Or war porn. People disagree on what that reason is. Reflecting on the horrors he witnessed during the Siege of Sarajevo, Jeremy Bowen asks whether it is enough to report it straight. He consults two of those he was with in Sarajevo: former Reuters journalist Sabina Cosic, and CNN's chief international correspondent Christiane Amanpour, as well as journalist George Monbiot, Pulitzer Prize-winner Nikole Hannah-Jones, and Michael Buerk, who speaks of his concerns following his coverage of the Ethiopia famine. All episodes are available on BBC Sounds.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Great Lives

9.00pm Radio 4 Extra

The one and only Vivian Stanshall of the Bonzo Dog Doo-Dah Band (above) is the larger-than-life subject of this episode originally broadcast in 2009. Matthew Parris chats to fellow band member Neil Innes about his "wonderfully dangerous" friend and their time performing a quirky blend of jazz, psychedelic pop and absurd humour on tours and TV series. Stanshall died in 1995 but his widow Ki Longfellow is also present to warmly reflect on an eclectic life that not only produced a hit record (I'm the Urban Spaceman) and collaborations with Mike Oldfield among other rock glitterati, but surrealist radio gold in Rawlinson's End, as well. There are several amusing anecdotes, too, not least the one about a disgruntled Viv, a Warner Bros board meeting and a jar of maggots. An iconoclastic jester, indeed.

JEREMY ASPINALL

Crossing Continents

11.00am Radio 4

You will need a strong disposition to relive with one survivor the horrific night of 6 February, when the earthquake hit Turkey and Syria. But there are rewards. Syrian refugee Omar Barakat lost his wife and his elder son when his house in Antakya collapsed. He believes his younger son, Ahmed, also escaped. Emily Wither follows Omar as he searches south-east Turkey for his boy. He could be in an orphanage or a children's home. Syrian fashion designer Nadine has devoted herself to helping find missing children and has reunited around 500 with their families. Omar will not give up hope: "My darling, be careful, my soul. I hope all is well. I'm going to find you."

Omar lost his first born and his wife but believes Ahmed could still be alive. Many children went missing in the aftermath of the earthquake. Some ended up in hospitals or children's homes on the other side of the country and families have spent months trying to locate them. But for many of the estimated 3.5 million Syrian refugees, searching for lost loved ones is even harder – there are language barriers and a lack of money, or sometimes official ID cards. Omar has enlisted the help of Nadine who's trying to reunite Syrian families. Emily Wither follows Omar as he searches for his son across south-east Turkey. Also broadcast in Assignment at 8.05pm on World Service.

FRIDAY Radio

TODAY'S CHOICES

Heart and Soul

11.30am World Service

In 2020 China introduced the national security law in Hong Kong, which makes prosecuting protesters easier and curtails free speech. As a result, activists have fled to Taiwan where the main support system for these political refugees centres on Chi-Nan Presbyterian Church in Taipei City, which has a history of supporting pro-democracy activism and helps with basics such as accommodation, as well as providing medical and psychological back up, and services in Cantonese. Cindy Sui (above), the BBC's former correspondent in Taipei, meets some of those unable to return to their Hong Kong homes, to find out how they live and where they go from here. FIONA HUGHES

7.30pm Radio 3

"I would know my shadow and my light, so shall I at last be whole." Begun the day after the outbreak of the Second World War and inspired by the killing – of a German diplomat by a Polish Jew – that provoked the Nazis' Kristallnacht pogrom, Michael Tippett's Jungian oratorio A Child of Our Time follows the model of a Bach Passion, but with heart-stopping African-American spirituals replacing the Lutheran chorales, to shine a bright musical ray of springtime hope into the wintry darkness of humanity's seemingly endless cycle of oppression and aggression. MARK PAPPENHEIM

10.45 The Essay: Artists and the Spirit World

5/5. Donna Huddleston's "Witch Dance"

Jennifer Higgie reflects on how different ways of

essay takes Donna Huddleston's 2013 Witch Dance as its focus, tracing a line back to the work of the

and dancer Mary Wigman (1886–1973).

Huddleston's is a performance piece in which scenes unfold as if in a trance. (R)

11.00 Late Junction

Jennifer Lucy Allan presents a collaboration session between American vocal pioneer Joan La

Barbara – whose music explores the human voice

London bassist, vocalist and composer Ruth Goller, marked by her "thunderous bass-guitar hooks".

Plus an interpretation of Tuareg guitar sounds from Nigerien musician Moussa Tchinguou, and music used in religious ceremonies, including a sacred

Melkite chant from Parisian, Lebanese-raised

Sister Marie Keyrouz and a recording by ensemble

Gamelan Selonding in a Balinese temple.

Face behind the voice

Age 56
Current job
Co-presenter with Lenny Beige [Steve Furst] of The Beige-Green Room (every 4th Monday, 2–4pm) on Soho Radio. “We’ve known each other 30 years. We play music that you don’t hear very often on the radio – obscure library records, soundtracks, easy listening, strange cover versions. We also have interesting guests who’ve had long careers, like Elaine Delmar and Dana Gillespie.”

CV Born in east London, he studied art design at East Ham Technical College, furniture design at Trent Polytechnic and tailoring at the London College of Fashion. “I started running clubs when I was in Nottingham, moved back to London and did the same there. I don’t think I’ve ever had a real job.” His pivotal club was Smashing (1991–96). “It was the epicentre of the Britpop scene. At the height of house, we wanted a club where you could play a diverse mix of music for a diverse group of people, and encourage people to dress up again. Part of our gang were people like Pulp, Blur, Suede and Elastica. Prince wanted a VIP area. We turned him away.” He has also been a DJ for the likes of Paul McCartney, Rufus Wainwright and Brian Wilson. In 1995 Green and Tris Penna “kick-started the lounge music revival” with the first of 30 compilation albums. Green and Penna have also produced stage tributes to Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse. From 2011 to 2014 Green was the features editor of Beige magazine. Since 2012 he and James Lawler have presented many art exhibitions.

Social media – yes or no? “I only do Instagram – during lockdown, I found loads of amazing old films on YouTube and shared them. I don’t get involved in rows and dramas and that sort of thing.”

Best moments “Recently we’ve been having live performances on the show and the first one we did was with Kiki Dee. I’ve been a fan

since I was a kid. It was absolutely fantastic. I couldn’t take my eyes off her. She looked exactly the same as she did in the 1970s!”

Worst moments “I was DJ at a big warehouse party at the old Gainsborough studios, where Alfred Hitchcock directed movies. The DJ booth was about ten feet up on a ledge, so I had to carry my boxes of records up a ladder. I got set up, but then we got raided by the police. Didn’t even play a record.”

First radio memory “In my dad’s car, listening to the theme from The Good, the Bad and the Ugly. I remember the strangeness; it sounded like nothing else.”

Favourite broadcasters “I’ve got very fond memories of David Jacobs. He used to play Blossom Dearie, jazz, all kinds of things, and there was a sophisticated, cool, accessible quality to his shows.”

Secret skills “I can hand-sew a buttonhole. In fact I can hand-tailor a suit, if required.”

DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice Martin Green Soho Radio

Age 56
Current job
 Co-presenter with Lenny Beige [Steve Furst] of The Beige-Green Room (every 4th Monday, 2–4pm) on Soho Radio. "We've known each other 30 years. We play music that you don't hear very often on the radio – obscure library records, soundtracks, easy listening, strange cover versions. We also have interesting guests who've had long careers, like Elaine Delmar and Dana Gillespie." CV Born in east London, he studied art design at East Ham Technical College, furniture design at Trent Polytechnic and tailoring at the London College of Fashion. "I started running clubs when I was in Nottingham, moved back to London and did the same there. I don't think I've ever had a real job." His pivotal club was Smashing (1991–96). "It was the epicentre of the Britpop scene. At the height of house, we wanted a club where you could play a diverse mix of music for a diverse group of people, and encourage people to dress up again. Part of our gang were people like Pulp, Blur, Suede and Elastica. Prince wanted a VIP area. We turned him away." He has also been a DJ for the likes of Paul McCartney, Rufus Wainwright and Brian Wilson. In 1995 Green and Tris Penna "kick-started the lounge music revival" with the first of 30 compilation albums. Green and Penna have also produced stage tributes to Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse. From 2011 to 2014 Green was the features editor of Beige magazine. Since 2012 he and James Lawler have presented many art exhibitions. Social media – yes or no? "I only do Instagram – during lockdown, I found loads of amazing old films on YouTube and shared them. I don't get involved in rows and dramas and that sort of thing." Best moments "Recently we've been having live performances on the show and the first one we did was with Kiki Dee. I've been a fan since I was a kid. It was absolutely fantastic. I couldn't take my eyes off her. She looked exactly the same as she did in the 1970s!" Worst moments "I was DJ at a big warehouse party at the old Gainsborough studios, where Alfred Hitchcock directed movies. The DJ booth was about ten feet up on a ledge, so I had to carry my boxes of records up a ladder. I got set up, but then we got raided by the police. Didn't even play a record." First radio memory "In my dad's car, listening to the theme from The Good, the Bad and the Ugly. I remember the strangeness; it sounded like nothing else." Favourite broadcasters "I've got very fond memories of David Jacobs. He used to play Blossom Dearie, jazz, all kinds of things, and there was a sophisticated, cool, accessible quality to his shows." Secret skills "I can hand-sew a buttonhole. In fact I can hand-tailor a suit, if required." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice Martin Green Soho Radio

Age 56
Co-presenter with Lenny Beige [Steve Furst] of The Beige-Green Room (every 4th Monday, 2–4pm) on Soho Radio. "We've known each other 30 years. We play music that you don't hear very often on the radio – obscure library records, soundtracks, easy listening, strange cover versions. We also have interesting guests who've had long careers, like Elaine Delmar and Dana Gillespie." CV Born in east London, he studied art design at East Ham Technical College, furniture design at Trent Polytechnic and tailoring at the London College of Fashion. "I started running clubs when I was in Nottingham, moved back to London and did the same there. I don't think I've ever had a real job." His pivotal club was Smashing (1991–96). "It was the epicentre of the Britpop scene. At the height of house, we wanted a club where you could play a diverse mix of music for a diverse group of people, and encourage people to dress up again. Part of our gang were people like Pulp, Blur, Suede and Elastica. Prince wanted a VIP area. We turned him away." He has also been a DJ for the likes of Paul McCartney, Rufus Wainwright and Brian Wilson. In 1995 Green and Tris Penna "kick-started the lounge music revival" with the first of 30 compilation albums. Green and Penna have also produced stage tributes to Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse. From 2011 to 2014 Green was the features editor of Beige magazine. Since 2012 he and James Lawler have presented many art exhibitions. Social media – yes or no? "I only do Instagram – during lockdown, I found loads of amazing old films on YouTube and shared them. I don't get involved in rows and dramas and that sort of thing." Best moments "Recently we've been having live performances on the show and the first one we did was with Kiki Dee. I've been a fan since I was a kid. It was absolutely fantastic. I couldn't take my eyes off her. She looked exactly the same as she did in the 1970s!" Worst moments "I was DJ at a big warehouse party at the old Gainsborough studios, where Alfred Hitchcock directed movies. The DJ booth was about ten feet up on a ledge, so I had to carry my boxes of records up a ladder. I got set up, but then we got raided by the police. Didn't even play a record." First radio memory "In my dad's car, listening to the theme from The Good, the Bad and the Ugly. I remember the strangeness; it sounded like nothing else." Favourite broadcasters "I've got very fond memories of David Jacobs. He used to play Blossom Dearie, jazz, all kinds of things, and there was a sophisticated, cool, accessible quality to his shows." Secret skills "I can hand-sew a buttonhole. In fact I can hand-tailor a suit, if required." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice Martin Green Soho Radio

Age 56
 Co-presenter with Lenny Beige [Steve Furst] of The Beige-Green Room (every 4th Monday, 2–4pm) on Soho Radio.
 “We’ve known each other 30 years. We play music that you don’t hear very often on the radio – obscure library records, soundtracks, easy listening, strange cover versions. We also have interesting guests who’ve had long careers, like Elaine Delmar and Dana Gillespie.”
CV Born in east London, he studied art design at East Ham Technical College, furniture design at Trent Polytechnic and tailoring at the London College of Fashion.
 “I started running clubs when I was in Nottingham, moved back to London and did the same there. I don’t think I’ve ever had a real job.”
 His pivotal club was Smashing (1991–96). “It was the epicentre of the Britpop scene. At the height of house, we wanted a club where you could play a diverse mix of music for a diverse group of people, and encourage people to dress up again. Part of our gang were people like Pulp, Blur, Suede and Elastica. Prince wanted a VIP area. We turned him away.”

 He has also been a DJ for the likes of Paul McCartney, Rufus Wainwright and Brian Wilson.
 In 1995 Green and Tris Penna “kick-started the lounge music revival” with the first of 30 compilation albums. Green and Penna have also produced stage tributes to Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse. From 2011 to 2014 Green was the features editor of Beige magazine. Since 2012 he and James Lawler have presented many art exhibitions.
Social media – yes or no? “I only do Instagram – during lockdown, I found loads of amazing old films on YouTube and shared them. I don’t get involved in rows and dramas and that sort of thing.”
Best moments “Recently we’ve been having live performances on the show and the first one we did was with Kiki Dee. I’ve been a fan since I was a kid. It was absolutely fantastic. I couldn’t take my eyes off her. She looked exactly the same as she did in the 1970s!”

Worst moments “I was DJ at a big warehouse party at the old Gainsborough studios, where Alfred Hitchcock directed movies. The DJ booth was about ten feet up on a ledge, so I had to carry my boxes of records up a ladder. I got set up, but then we got raided by the police. Didn’t even play a record.”
First radio memory “In my dad’s car, listening to the theme from The Good, the Bad and the Ugly. I remember the strangeness; it sounded like nothing else.”
Favourite broadcasters “I’ve got very fond memories of David Jacobs. He used to play Blossom Dearie, jazz, all kinds of things, and there was a sophisticated, cool, accessible quality to his shows.”
Secret skills “I can hand-sew a buttonhole. In fact I can hand-tailor a suit, if required.”

TURNING THE CLOCK BACK

Horologist Rebecca Struthers can spend years repairing a watch – but what has her craft taught her about time?

Book of the Week: Hands of Time
Mon–Fri 9.45am (FM), 12.30am Radio 4

JAY BLADES HAS a lot to answer for. Watchmaker and restorer Rebecca Struthers currently has work booked up until 2028. “When someone comes to me with a really personal story, I just can’t turn them away,” she says. “The Repair Shop has definitely changed things, because I used to just get emails saying ‘Can you take a look at this watch?’. Now I get a whole history essay, or ‘This belonged to my great grandmother, then she passed away and this is all I have left...’ And they’re much harder to say no to.”

Into that schedule, Struthers has also somehow managed – with the efficient precision of a watchmaker – to insert the writing of a book, Hands of Time, this week’s Book of the Week on Radio 4. It’s an exquisitely honed read, both personal and universal (“a history of time,” Struthers calls it, “told through some of the ingenious objects that we’ve invented to measure it”). And it’s not just for nerds: “I wrote this for watch geeks to give their significant others [not the other way round] – so they could convince them that the thing they love is a fascinating and enjoyable subject!”

And why is it so fascinating? “Watches are a work of wearable technology that for 500 years we’ve been using to send messages to other people about ourselves,” explains Struthers over Zoom from the tool-strewn workshop she shares with her husband and co-horologist Craig. “For example, take ‘form’ watches. These beautiful, incredibly decorative things appear towards the end of the 16th century, made out of gold and gemstones, and they get their name because they take the form of something else – a rabbit, a book, a snail, or, in the case of Mary, Queen of Scots, a skull. But this was quite a

Roman Catholic thing, so with the rise of Puritanism, all that ornamentation was stripped away, and although watches were still very expensive and luxurious things, they became plain, smooth, almost like a pebble. Then as soon as Cromwell went and we had a king back on the throne again, we went back to really decorative pieces. You can follow all these religious and social changes just through watches.”

The histories of individual watches are just as intriguing, says Struthers, recounting the story of a Movado “Weems” she restored. Issued to RAF pilots and navigators during the Second World War, only 2,500 were ever made – one of them destined for the wrist of Pilot Officer Francis Edward Frayn. Shot down just after Dunkirk, Frayn was the only survivor after his bomber exploded, narrowly escaped German troops and was rescued close to death. The watch never worked again... until Frayn’s son brought it to Struthers asking her to fix it up so his son could one day wear it.

It was quite a job – “It really looked like it had come from a shot-down aircraft” – but it’s these “intimate personal stories, part of history’s much bigger

MEMENTO MORI
Mary, Queen of Scots (above) reportedly gave a watch in the shape of a skull to one of her attendants before her execution stories, that connect you and the objects and people of the past," says Struthers. "I still get goosebumps thinking about it."

Asked which watch she'd most like to get her tools on, Struthers picks Marie Antoinette's: "It was the most complicated in the world, with gold replacing all other metals inside. There was an open chequebook and no deadline – which meant it wasn't finished before Marie died, so she never saw it."

Struthers, the first watchmaker in British history to gain a PhD in horology, is known in the industry as the Time Doctor ("I got called it a couple of times, and thought I'd roll with it, in the hope it might one day get me a bit part on Doctor Who").

But does working with time – and in such minute detail that she might spend six years working on a single watch – give her a unique perspective on it?

"I've definitely become a lot more relaxed about time," she reflects. "Older watches aren't that accurate, and I've realised you don't necessarily need that much accuracy in your life." Not every minute in life has to count, she suggests, adding that "until the invention of something called the hairspring, in 1675, watches didn't even have a minute hand" – it was enough to meet at "roughly the hour when the church bell tower struck a certain time of day".

THAT CERTAINLY SOUNDS liberating, as does Struthers's assertion that watches are "beautiful objects that are there to help us, but we don't need to be controlled by them". With a horologist's perspective, she explains that "we feel 'time guilt' for not being busy enough, which comes from Puritanism and the industrialists who were trying to get us to work harder during the Industrial Revolution. To this day, we're sticking with ideas from 300 years ago that were designed so people could make more money out of us."

And then, perhaps with the extra perspective lent by her own recent diagnosis with multiple sclerosis, the Time Doctor adds this: "With the realisation that our time is limited, you have to ask 'How are we going to spend it?' Do you want to spend it stressing out about how little you've got left? Or do you want to enjoy the time you have?" ED GRENBY

RISING STARS

Clematis add vertical interest to your garden – and you can pack them in, says Joe Swift

ALL HAIL THE “Queen of Climbers”! That’s the name sometimes given to clematis, and these regal plants come in all shapes and sizes. The exotic, evergreen C armandii and shed-concealing C montana are vigorous climbers; others, like early C alpinas, are far more diminutive. For those who like their plants showy, there are the summer-flowering ones with plate-sized blooms and brightly striped petals that remind me of painted beach huts!

Clematis don’t take up much ground space, so you can pack them in to scramble up walls, fences, arbours and pergolas. Trees, shrubs and large roses make a good support for some, such as “Etoile Violette” or “Kermesina” – it’s a proven way to gain an extra season of interest.

Now’s the time to plant them all, but if you want good succession think strategically. The dainty alpinas and macropetalas bloom first in spring, followed by the montanas in late spring, with the early and late large-flowering varieties in summer. From mid- to late-summer, we have some fabulous viticellas, texensis and orientalis varieties. Here are a few of my favourites...

EARLY C alpina “Frances Ravis”

Blue and white nodding flowers in April and May.

MID C montana “Pink Perfection”

Sweet-scented pink flowers in May/June.

LATE C orientalis “Bill MacKenzie”

WINTER Clematis cirrhosa “Freckles”

A winter-flowering clematis, with small, bell-like creamy flowers.

HOW TO PLANT

Dig a hole around 45cm square and deep. Fork the bottom, add some garden compost and a handful of bonemeal. Place the plant leaning towards its support, ensuring when it’s backfilled that the top of its compost ends up 12–15cm below the surrounding soil level. Backfill with 50% garden soil mixed with 50% multi-purpose compost and water well: don’t let it dry out but don’t drown it, either! Clematis like their heads in sun and roots in shade. Cover their roots with some pieces of slate, stone or woodchips, or grow some perennials in front to cast shade.

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

Growing herbs in pots

Picking and using fresh herbs in your cooking is what it's all about – they are far tastier than dried ones in packets. Most are easy to grow and do well in pots and containers. And now's the time to plant!

CLIMBING QUEENS

HARDY HERBS

These can be left outdoors all year round. Evergreen examples (bay, sage, rosemary, thyme) add structure to a container design, and snipping bits off should keep them in good shape. Perennial herbs (mint, oregano, parsley, chives) die down and come back every year. Some, such as mint, are vigorous, so best in a pot anyway.

ANNUAL HERBS

Annual herbs only last a season. Good ones for containers include chervil, which does well in a little shade, and coriander (a little shade will help stop it going to seed). If they do flower and seed, no problem: the flowers are pretty and great for beneficial insects. French tarragon can't be grown from seed so buy small plants. Sweet basil is a favourite but try Greek and purple basil, too. Picking them regularly will also encourage strong new growth. They can be grown from seed or bought in pot to grow on. The cheat is to buy supermarket plants for around £2, split, pot up and grow on.

GROWING GUIDE

Most are sun-lovers. Multipurpose compost tends to dry out, so a loam-based compost such as peat-free John Innes No 1 with around 25 per cent added grit or perlite is ideal. Keep the soil moist but not wet; water when the top of the soil has dried out. For most herbs use a weak organic feed such as liquid seaweed every couple of weeks to the roots.

Florida Man

Available now Netflix

TO ANYONE WHO likes to describe themselves as a “traveller” rather than a “tourist”, the prospect of a trip to the supposed plastic paradise of central Florida – theme park capital of the world, and home to the planet’s largest McDonald’s, no less – would make them think more than twice. And the new Netflix drama Florida Man won’t help the case. From the makers of Ozark, it’s likely to do for the Sunshine State what the aforementioned Jason Bateman-led, critically lauded crime series did for the Midwest and Missouri... that is, not much.

Starring Édgar Ramírez as an ex-cop who returns to his home state to locate a Philadelphia mobster’s missing girlfriend, it doesn’t exactly paint Florida in the kind of light that a tourist board would be particularly proud of. Indeed, even the title is named after the internet phenomenon of “Florida Man” that, according to Wikipedia, refers to “an alleged prevalence of male persons performing irrational, maniacal, or absurd actions in the US state”. However, if you do have a spare half hour, do an online search on those two words and then bask in the wonder of humanity.

It’s not the best preconception to touch down in Orlando International Airport with, true, but for now I’m not being shepherded into the beating heart of the Magic Kingdom, but somewhere on the edge. Kissimmee is the perfect compromise between the lure of the thrill rides and a more local, artisan, and, in some cases, prehistoric Florida. (And no, I’m not talking about the new Jurassic World VelociCoaster at Universal Studios... although we will come to that.)

JUST SOUTH OF Orlando, Kissimmee’s “gateway to the parks” status, combined with being a buzzy city in its own right, means that in the morning, you could be on an airboat swamp tour with the wind zipping through your hair, spend lunchtime strolling through Old Town – with its brick-lined streets, colourful independent shops and leafy canopies – and then, a 40-minute drive later, you could be in Epcot with a couple of hours spare before the daily closing-time fireworks. I’m based at Magic Village, a gated community that’s just minutes from Disney’s Animal Kingdom. It has a nice combination of a resort feel with on-site

A short step away from the theme parks, experience the gentler charms of the Sunshine State restaurants and a sizable swimming pool while giving you the freedom of a self-catered option in some very polished, airy, and air-conditioned townhouse-style accommodation.

The weather in Florida is always changeable: bright blue skies and scorching sun one moment, the next rolling thunder, fork lighting, and the kind of rain that would negate the need for log-flume rides. It is, however, always humid: this is a State built on prehistoric swampland, where the alligators are more native than the people. So a visit to the Everglades – the most natural, secluded, picturesque and other-worldly offering in central Florida – should be of the utmost priority. I went with a company called Wild

Florida, which offers a drive-through safari park, a ‘gator park and airboat tours driven by people like Captain Jeff, all handlebar moustache, aviator shades, and no-nonsense Floridian drawl.

BBQ is also a way of life around these parts (though hopefully not involving any of the creatures I’ve just met). An excellent way to fill up away from the strip malls and fast food joints is the chunky slice of old-school Americana that is Big John’s Rockin’ BBQ, where you can gorge yourself on pork, chicken, ribs, brisket and sausage... and potentially some vegetables too. If you’d rather float than walk after such a session, then the picturesque Winter Park boat tour takes you along the man-made canals of Central Florida’s oldest community, founded by wealthy Easterners in the 1800s, in what feels like a behind-the-scenes tour of Orlando.

To be able to retreat to accommodation that’s close enough to make the theme parks easily doable – but far enough away to be out of the madness – is a blessing, and you can feel yourself decompressing as the final theme park sign whizzes past you in the other direction on the free-way. That said, to come to Florida and not dip a toe into either Disney, Universal or both would be to forgo some serious fun. Of course, parting with significant amounts of cash will get you through the ride queues more quickly, but if your time is limited, Hagrid's Motorbike Adventures and the VelociCoaster at Universal, and the new Guardians of the Galaxy ride at Epcot, are the ones to stand in line for.

This part of the world is, largely, about the theme parks, but Kissimmee and its surrounds do an excellent job of softening the edges with touches of beauty, Americana and authenticity. If you manage to avoid the kind of characters that make up Florida Man, all the better. MATT CHARLTON

RT MONEY PARTNER

ENJOY YOUR RETIREMENT WITH EQUITY RELEASE

Unlock the potential of your home's equity to give you the freedom to live the life you deserve

If you're at or approaching retirement age, you may be considering how you will fund your future. Homeowners aged 55 and over can unlock the money that's built up in their property to achieve their retirement plans. Once any existing mortgage has been repaid, the tax-free money is yours.

To help you find out more, Radio Times has partnered with Age Partnership+, part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*. Their team are available to explore your options and tell you everything you need to know about equity release, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave, and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

With a no-obligation personalised illustration, they will help you understand the features and risks, and explain that equity release may involve a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property, or a home reversion plan. Equity release requires paying off any existing mortgage, and any money released, plus accrued interest, would be repaid upon death or moving into long-term care.

Plus, your FREE Radio Times guide to equity release, written by RT's Paul Lewis, can help explain more about how equity release works, and if it could be right for you.

A MATTER OF INTEREST

Tax may be due on the interest that your savings earns, cautions Paul Lewis

IF YOU HAVE more than around £25,000 in savings, you may find that tax is due on the interest it earns. For taxpayers, the first £1,000 of savings interest is normally tax-free. But that amount has not been increased since it was introduced seven years ago – when interest paid was barely a third as much as is paid now. Over the last couple of years interest rates fell to 0.5 per cent or even less, so earning £1,000 interest on your savings was than that, you would probably find tax was due on some of the interest. And if you pay higher-rate tax, the personal savings allowance is halved to just £500. So you can have just half those amounts before tax is due.

Banks and building societies inform HM Revenue & Customs about the interest they pay to you. HMRC should then adjust your tax code so that any tax due is collected from your taxable earnings or pension. If you fill in a self-assessment form you must declare all the interest earned on that.

‘Consider moving some of your savings to a best-buy ISA’

a distant dream for most! You could safely have £100,000 or more earning interest tax-free. But now, with rates on instant-access accounts topping 3.5 per cent, and 4.5 per cent on fixed-term savings, much lower sums in your accounts will hit that £1,000 tax-free limit.

Currently the best easy-access account is from Chip (part of Clear-Bank), which pays 3.55 per cent. So the interest on £28,169 would be £1,000, using up all your tax-free allowance. A best-buy one-year bond from Oxbury at 4.54 per cent would earn you £1,000 in the year on just £22,026. If your savings are more

HOWEVER, IF YOU are not a taxpayer already or your other income is below £17,570 you can earn more than £1,000 interest without paying tax (it's called the starting rate for savings), and up to another £5,000 savings interest is tax-free with the £1,000 personal savings allowance on top of that. The calculation is a bit fiddly but you can see the details by searching gov.uk for “tax on savings interest”.

If you're in danger of paying tax on your interest, consider moving some of your savings to a best-buy ISA where all interest is paid tax-free; check rates at savingschampion.co.uk.

DICTIONARY CORNER

Susie Dent

Expression of the week On the lam

The term "on the lam", meaning "on the run", joins a family of other words newspapers like to use in the context of a criminal "caper" or "heist". Its story began in 19th-century North America, when to "lam" meant to escape or flee, particularly from the authorities. To be on the lam, therefore, meant to be in flight from the police.

But what is exactly is a lam? It all goes back to a very different sense of the word, meaning "to hit hard" or "strike" – a word with Scandinavian origins that is at the heart of "lambaste", in which "baste" also means "thrash", producing a hefty double-whammy. To "lam it", meanwhile, especially in schoolboy slang, meant to run off or, continuing with the "hitting" idea, to "beat it".

EDITED BY JANE HILL

PROTEST IGNORED

On 22 April I spent an amazing day in Westminster supporting the Big One climate protest organised by Extinction Rebellion and supported by more than a hundred organisations from all over the country. The march included at least 20,000 people of all ages, from babies in buggies up to pensioners like me. The banners, placards and costumes were spectacular and the whole event completely peaceful.

I could not believe that it was not covered at all in most of the TV or radio bulletins on the day and barely mentioned later, except regarding concerns that it might affect the London Marathon (which it did not).

The BBC, on the whole, is good at discussing climate change so I can't help wondering if there was political direction involved.

Judy Owen London N16

...I attended the climate change demos in London, braving the wind and rain, as did thousands of others. The media coverage was almost zero, and they wonder why people choose instead to glue themselves to roads and throw paint at snooker games!

Francesca Taylor London W14
A BBC spokesperson responds: "The BBC did cover the protest, both in advance and on the day. While we are committed to extensive coverage of the many dimensions of climate change, decisions about the extent of coverage on the shorter Saturday bulletins were an independent news judgement made on a busy news day, which included the unfolding crisis in Sudan."

YOUTHFUL SHOOT

LETTER OF THE WEEK

An unfair elimination

I was thrilled to see Race across the World (Wednesday BBC1) return and I'm enjoying Canada's stunning scenery. However, I was disappointed to discover that one of the couples was eliminated midway through. The pairs decide their strategy by balancing time against budget, and choose when to pause to earn money or enjoy amazing experiences. All assumed they were racing the full journey from Vancouver to St John's, and might have made different decisions if they'd known the slowest pair would be leaving in the third stage.

In Strictly or Bake Off, contestants know from the start that one person leaves the competition each week. It seemed unkind to unexpectedly introduce this during the race.

Jennie Bennett Bristol

Sleek and practical, this DAB/DAB+/FM radio has pre-sets for up to 20 stations, both a radio and a buzzer alarm with snooze function and an audio fade-out setting for listening in bed. ## SHEER POETRY

I'm sure I won't be the only one writing to congratulate poet Casi Wyn and the producers of the Radio 4 programme Where Once Were Farms (16 April). This exquisitely crafted piece that combined journalism and poetry somehow managed to be shocking, moving and beautiful. At times it was almost too painful to listen to, but the combination of the message, the lovely Welsh voices, the sounds of the countryside and the songs of the children were sheer poetry. It should be required listening for the decision-makers.

Mark Probert
Yetminster, Dorset

IT'S A WRAP

The beautiful Easter designs hidden throughout the 8 April issue of RT were too good to bin. So I spent a whole evening and morning decorating the bin with them instead!

Lesley Cole
Southampton
How clever – and it looks so spring-like! Lesley's recycling wins her a DVD of This Is Going to Hurt – Ben Whishaw stars as a junior doctor under pressure in the multi-Bafta-nominated BBC1 adaptation of Adam Kay's bestselling memoir.

THAT'S ALL GOOD THEN

RT's Grapevine column (15 April) reports that the BBC is cutting the hours of new CBBC shows by a third, all part of an ongoing "fewer, bigger, better" ethos.

This is alarming news but what makes it frightening is that it mirrors pretty much what the BBC comedy W1A's Anna Rampton, director of Better, said to her colleagues: "This is about identifying what we do best and finding more ways of doing less of it better". Her ridiculous statement made me laugh, the BBC's doesn't.

Karen Wilson

HELPFUL UPDATE

When broadcasting live football, and subsequent programmes are delayed because of extra time, how about the broadcasters running a banner at the bottom of the screen giving the time that normal programmes will resume?

For instance, during the FA Cup semi-final (23 April BBC1), the banner "Manchester United win 7-6 on penalties" could easily have also said, "The News will begin at 7.40pm".

Bill Martin Norwich

JAPAN'S GOT FLATULENCE

I was appalled to see ITV1 reaching an all-time low in Britain's Got Talent (15 April). The inclusion of the "Japanese Wind Musician" Ichikawa Koikuchi was a step too far, especially when there must be plenty of other acts worthy of inclusion. I shan't be watching Britain's Got Talent again.

Colin Savory
Tadley, Hampshire

TOO MUCH NICKY?

I'm sure Radio 5 Live's Nicky Campbell is a good broadcaster, but why has he been shipped in to replace BBC Television News as a simulcast on BBC2 weekdays from 9am? Not only is he on BBC2, he is also on the BBC News channel. Give us back our television news!

Mike Ruddock
Banbury, Oxfordshire

READY FOR A REVIVAL

Inspired scheduling to repeat When Albums Ruled the World (21 April BBC4) the day before national Record Store Day. It was an uplifting greatest hits history of vinyl, taking us on a spiritual journey from the houses of the holy to the dark side of the Moon.

A gem such as this could only have come from BBC4 – which makes it even sadder that BBC4's future is so uncertain. I wish they'd let it be.

Jon Askew Bedford

LEN GOODMAN 1944-2023

'Let's give it some razzle dazzle'

Lucy Worsley pays tribute to the dance master

When we married, my husband made me sign a pre-nuptial contract. It was very short. In fact, it had only one clause: that I would never appear on Strictly Come Dancing. I agreed but instantly started looking for a workaround. And so the idea of a programme about the history of dancing, co-presented with head judge Len Goodman, was born.

It became the three-part 2014 series Dancing Cheek to Cheek: an Intimate History of Dance. Len and I spent a summer dancing and filming together, and I learnt how the Goodman magic worked. He was exactly the same cheeky, chirpy person on and off camera. Many an anecdote would begin, "When I was a lad, back in Bethnal Green..." He would drive me around in his Jaguar with its cream leather seats, which I enjoyed, apart from one thing: talking wasn't allowed, because we had to listen to the golf on the radio.

Len had a dodgy knee, and our historical dances had to be choreographed to accommodate this. Neither could he really be bothered to remember the moves, whereas I would usually stay up all night trying to memorise them. The thing was, he didn't need to: he had the charisma and confidence to carry off any misstep. And he passed this on to his partner, just by being himself.

Before each performance, I'd sit quaking in my dressing room, until he came in to say something that changed everything. "Luce, me old sausage," he'd say, "let's give it some razzle dazzle."

The finale of our series involved us dancing down the stairs at the Café Royal in London, with our troupe and our band, and Len tossing me into the air.

Dancing with the legendary Len was truly a highlight of my life.

BARRY HUMPHRIES
1934–2023

‘He loved teasing the British public’

Baroness Bakewell on the comedy legend – her friend since the 1960s

I first met Barry Humphries in the 1960s when he'd arrived in London from Australia.

He was looking around to see where he could fit into the entertainment world and came on the programme that I presented, Late Night Line-Up, to try out his early version of Dame Edna Everage.

Dame Edna was quite frumpy in those days – she wore a felt hat and a rather shabby overcoat. We encouraged Barry to be more extravagant and the further he went, the more we laughed. From that came an impetus to go out there and exaggerate her. And, of course, he took it to a fantastic level.

I never had trouble with Dame Edna as a caricature of women. Barry was puncturing hypocrisy and false attitudes. Edna was so grotesque, it just made you laugh all the time.

We became good friends and when he did his shows in the West End, he always invited me.

I would say,

“The condition of my coming is that you don't pick me out in the audience and mock me.” And he said, “No, I won't do that.” And he kept his word.

Barry was a fantastic performer but also an artist and writer – he had a brilliant mind. I remember him saying to me, “Three giants of Australian culture came over at the same time.” He meant Germaine Greer, Clive James and him. He thought all three were equals for the impact they had on our culture and quite rightly.

He was enormously cultivated, but he wasn't flamboyant about how much he knew; he just happened to know a lot of things. He could hold his own at the high tables of Oxford colleges, but also had mass appeal. Ordinary people loved him and intellectuals enjoyed his conversation because he knew more than they did.

He saw what television could do. His TV specials were absolutely amazing, but then, Barry had total confidence in his skills, which he polished and worked on – he knew he could trust them.

As Dame Edna, he loved teasing and mocking the British public but he did it with great generosity so that the audience never felt hurt or insulted. Politically, Barry was probably something of a conservative. He respected the establishment and admired many things about it, and that gave him permission to pick away at it and mock it. I think you only mock something as thoroughly as he did if you admire it in some way.

The final time I saw Barry was on Portrait Artist of the Year in 2021. He was the star sitter at the end of the series and he brought along his own drawing pad and pencil so that he could draw the people who were painting him. My last memory of him is of just how much he enjoyed himself.

We never fell in love or had an affair or anything like that, but we did like each other a lot. He was very loyal and remembered you. Last Christmas, I received a book that he had published, called Poems I Love. Barry had given 90 copies to his friends. At the front, he'd put in it, “To my friend Joan, from Barry.”

SOPHIE RAWORTH

The broadcaster on royal pianos, pineapples – and being stopped by the police

What's the view from your sofa?

I have two sofas but only one television, so I'm either looking at the TV, a fireplace and out of the window, or at the TV, out into the kitchen and at a grand piano, which we inherited when we bought the house.

Do you have a party piece?

Alistair McGowan recruited me for a concert of celebrities playing piano. I learnt a piece by Grieg off by heart over six months and performed it on stage – terrified from start to finish. Never again!

What have you been enjoying on telly?

You have to be careful at work, working out in hushed conversations who's seen something and who hasn't – with Succession more than most. The "wow" episode really was wow! I seek out French documentaries to keep my languages going and I've started watching The Morning Show. Having worked on breakfast television a long time ago, I couldn't believe how many people were working behind the scenes and how late the presenters seemed to stay up. That isn't my recollection...

What are you doing for the BBC's coronation coverage?

I'll be near the west door of Westminster Abbey, talking to people as they enter and leave. Hundreds have been invited for charity and community work, so there should be plenty of stories – my job will be drawing out the best ones. But it's history in action, isn't it? Just being there will be fascinating.

Will you make a beeline for anyone?

I won't be anywhere near the key players – I'm not going to get Prince Harry! But there should be some great stories out there to bring to viewers.

What sort of king do you think Charles is shaping up to be?

I'm not going there – I'm impartial! I've no idea. We'll have to wait and see.

How was the experience of broadcasting from the Queen's funeral?

Being right in the centre of these events is very different from watching on TV. There were six of us in the middle of Parliament Square, the only people not involved as part of the military or the funeral cortege, and while it was a real privilege, you see such a limited part of it. You really come to appreciate the skills behind the production.

Would you ever leave the BBC?

I'm sure I will one day! Thirty years is a long time, and I never expected to be a presenter. I was 28 or 29, and so shy when they first asked me. I remember thinking, "Great, I'll be doing this until I'm 40." I'm now nearly 55 and still very much enjoying it.

The news cycle has been extraordinary recently. Has it felt like that where you are, in the eye of the storm?

Definitely, and never more so than at the start of Covid. I ran in to work through empty streets during the first few weeks of lockdown and stopped to take photographs as I went. I had to produce

MY LIFE IN TV

MY DRINK OF CHOICE

It depends what time it is. A glass of wine, or a cup of mint tea if it's getting late. I don't really eat in front of the television.

MY FILM
Everything Everywhere All at Once. It may have won all the Oscars but it completely baffled me!

my work pass for the police, who asked why I was taking photos – they told me this was no time to be a tourist! It was the first time I'd reported on a story that I was living as well, so it was the most extraordinary period.

What's the most interesting thing that your job has enabled you to do?

Who Do You Think You Are? was amazing. I'd never have known that some of my ancestors grew pineapples in the 1800s in Yorkshire, and that others were making pianos in Pall Mall for the royal family.

What's the best piece of advice you've received?

I'd been offered a producing job in Brussels and I wasn't sure about it, when Kevin Bocquet, the [former] North of England correspondent, said to me, "When a door opens, push it because you never know what's on the other side." I've followed that advice ever since.
